

The Christology of Wolfhart Pannenberg

E. Frank Tupper

The Christology of Wolfhart Pannenberg constitutes one of the most significant theological developments in the history of modern theology. Combining exegetical and philosophical insights, fusing historical and contemporary concerns, Pannenberg reformulates the entire christological tradition in the light of the eschatological history of Jesus Christ. As the first and most important exponent of "eschatological theology," Pannenberg has dramatically refocused key theological issues and thrust them into the center of theological debate: the apocalyptic bridge from the Old Testament to the New, from the prophets through Jesus to the Church; the rootedness of revelation in history and the referral of faith to revelatory history, i.e., universal history; the proleptic self-revelation of God in Jesus of Nazareth; the identity of the kerygmatic Christ with the historical Jesus through the historicity of Jesus' resurrection; the eschatological conception of God as "the power of the future"; and the primacy of the oncoming Kingdom of God which Jesus proclaimed for structuring Church life and Christian ethics. Since all these issues impinge upon and are informed by the figure of Jesus, Pannenberg's conception of the history and person of Jesus is foundational for his Christology and crucial for understanding it. Therefore, while not ignoring his incisive reformulation of the christological tradition, this essay grapples primarily with Pannenberg's Gestalt of Jesus Christ, only suggesting how he appropriates the Christ event theologically.¹

I. Christology "From Below"

Pannenberg affirms as his starting point: "Christology deals with Jesus as the basis of the confession that he is the Christ of God."² Yet the "Jesus" of which Christology speaks may refer to the historical Jesus of the past or the Jesus of contemporary proclamation. Asking methodologically whether Christology should begin with Jesus himself or with the kerygma of the Church, Pannenberg contends that Christology must get back to Jesus himself through the witness of the apostles, judging: "It is quite possible to distinguish the figure of Jesus himself, as well as the outlines of his message,
