Science and History of the Piano Julian Ting,2022-01-14 The first issue related to science that one encounters in daily life might be a musical instrument Many children began to learn the piano or the violin from kindergarten age they can hence proceed to perform recitals in high school One who plays a violin must inevitably tune this instrument daily If a string breaks it must be replaced Sometimes a bridge must be made and the sound post adjusted Pianists however have access only to the keyboard Tuning That is a matter for a professional They hence have little idea about what pianos are School teachers never teach that High school science exhibitions seldom involve topics in this area Even though these studies are not in the mainstream of modern science the physics involved is not simple at all it is closely related to research in other fields The New York Times Guide to Essential Knowledge The New York Times,2011-10-25 Presents information on
