

4.20 Successful mass-production suburban house design depended upon creating illusions of a spacious lot—no matter how cramped the actual one might be. On these sites at least such a house should simply stand apart: front, back, sides. Comfortable House designers met this challenge in a variety of ingenious ways. For example, the Plaza model advertised in Arts and Crafts was sited ingeniously in town, surrounded by trees, with a wrap-around front porch and a back porch, also accessible from the side, where the gables of three porches repeated the front gables, a full “yard inside” was created.
