'A portrait of human nature in all its weirdness,
intricacy and eccentricity'
SUNDAY EXPRESS

A painting of a Venetian canal scene. In the foreground, a small boat with a person in it is on the water. The canal is flanked by colorful buildings with red roofs. In the background, there are large domes and churches. The water reflects the buildings and the sky. The title 'The City of Falling Angels' is written in a large, elegant script across the lower half of the image.

Law, Art and the Commons Merima Bruncevic,2017-10-12 The concept of the cultural commons has become increasingly important for legal studies Within this field however it is a contested concept at once presented as a sphere for creativity democratic access and freedom of speech but one that denies property rights and misappropriates the public domain In this book Merima Bruncevic takes up the cultural commons not merely as an abstract notion but in its connection to physical spaces such as museums and libraries A legal cultural commons can she argues be envisioned as a lawscape that can quite literally be entered and engaged with Focusing largely on art in the context of the copyright regime but also addressing a number of cultural heritage issues the book draws on the work of Deleuze and Guattari in order to examine the realm of the commons as a potential space for overcoming the dichotomy between the owner and the consumer of culture Challenging this dichotomy it is the productive and creative potential of law itself that is elicited through the book s approach to the commons as the empirical basis for a new legal framework which is able to accommodate a multitude of interests and values
