Neolithic and Bronze Ages stone circles and standing stones in Cumbria the Northern English county that boasts more of these monuments than any other Here the country's tallest mountains are ringed by almost fifty circles and henges most of them sited in the foothills or on outlying plateaux But why were these built We may never have a definitive answer to this question but by observing and comparing sites a greater understanding emerges Were some circles built for ritualistic purposes or perhaps astronomical Were they burial sites or simply meeting places Join Stan Abbott as he searches for the hidden stories these great monuments guard and might reveal if we get to know them The Use and reuse of stone circles Courtney Nimura, Richard Bradley, 2016-09-30 The study of stone circles has long played a major role in British and Irish archaeology and for Scotland most attention has been focused on the large monuments of Orkney and the Western Isles Several decades of fieldwork have shown how these major structures are likely to be of early date and recognized that that smaller settings of monoliths had a more extended history Many of the structures in Northern Britain were reused during the later Bronze Age the Iron Age and the early medieval period A series of problems demand further investigation including when were the last stone circles built How did they differ from earlier constructions How were they related to henge monuments especially those of Bronze Age date How frequently were these places reused and did this secondary activity change the character of those sites This major new assessment first presents the results of fieldwork undertaken at the Scottish recumbent stone circle of Hillhead the stone circles of Waulkmill and Croftmoraig the stone circle and henge at Hill of Tuach at Kintore and the small ring cairn at Laikenbuie in Inverness shire Part 2 brings together the results of these five projects and puts forward a chronology for the construction and primary use of stone circles particularly the Chalcolithic and Bronze Age examples It considers the reuse of stone circles long after they were built and discusses four neighboring stone circles in Aberdeenshire which display both similarities and contrasts in their architecture use of raw materials associated artefacts and structural sequences Finally a reassessment and reinterpretation of Croftmoraig and its sequence is presented the new interpretation drawing attention to ways of thinking about these monuments which have still to fulfill their potential
