Despite decades of government and philanthropic investment in international scholarship the most prestigious academic departments still favor research and expertise on the United States Why Seeing the World answers this question by examining university research centers that focus on the Middle East and related regional area studies Drawing on candid interviews with scores of top scholars and university leaders to understand how international inquiry is perceived and valued inside the academy Seeing the World explains how intense competition for tenure line appointments encourages faculty to pursue American projects that are most likely to garner professional advancement At the same time constrained by tight budgets at home university leaders eagerly court patrons and clients worldwide but have a hard time getting departmental faculty to join the program Together these dynamics shape how scholarship about the rest of the world evolves At once a work and occupations study of scholarly disciplines an essay on the formal organization of knowledge and an inquiry into the fate of area studies Seeing the World is a must read for anyone who cares about the future of knowledge in a global era

The Global Brain Satish Nambisan, Mohanbir Sawhney, 2010 All the talk about open innovation and externally focused innovation assumes that one size fits all in terms of what network centric innovation is and how companies should harness external creativity But the reality is that there is no one right way to master this tool For instance loosely governed community based innovation projects are a very different animal from tightly orchestrated development projects driven by a large firm As the landscape of network centric innovation becomes more diverse and more confusing there is a desperate need to structure the landscape to better understand different models for network centric innovation This book brings clarity to the confusion Further it argues that managers cannot rely on anecdotal success stories they read about in the press to implement a network centric innovation strategy They need rigorous and analytical advice on what role their company should play in an innovation network what capabilities they need to create and how they need to prepare their organization for this significant shift in the innovation approach This book offers a practical and detailed roadmap for planning and implementing an externally focused innovation strategy
