Solutions Wilhelm Ostwald, 1891 The Cambrian , 1900 Mysteries in History Paul D. Aron, 2005-11-07 This work is an engaging exploration of the process of historical research following historians as they search for solutions to the greatest mysteries of all time Award winning author Paul Aron takes readers on a journey through great historical mysteries through the ages Entertaining in themselves the stories also show that history is not merely living but lively The reader who comes to the book thinking history is boring will leave with a changed outlook with regard to both the subject matter and the process of writing history Each chapter is a carefully and thoroughly researched presentation not of popularized accounts but of valid historical scholarship Chronologically arranged the essays show the historical process in action For each disputed historical point theories arise become standard wisdom and then are revised as additional information becomes available This book reveals the mechanics of that process including spirited debate swashbuckling archaeology and the application of modern science to ancient questions , Cognitive Dynamics Eric Dietrich, Arthur B. Markman, 2014-03-05 Recent work in cognitive science much of it placed in opposition to a computational view of the mind has argued that the concept of representation and theories based on that concept are not sufficient to explain the details of cognitive processing. These attacks on representation have focused on the importance of context sensitivity in cognitive processing on the range of individual differences in performance and on the relationship between minds and the bodies and environments in which they exist. In each case models based on traditional assumptions about representation have been assumed to be too rigid to account for the effects of these factors on cognitive processing. In place of a representational view of mind other formalisms and methodologies such as nonlinear differential equations or dynamical systems and situated robotics have been proposed as better explanatory tools for understanding cognition. This book is based on the notion that while new tools and approaches for understanding cognition are valuable representational approaches do not need to be abandoned in the course of constructing new models and explanations. Rather models that incorporate representation are quite compatible with the kinds of complex situations being modeled with the new methods. This volume illustrates the power of this explicitly representational approach labeled cognitive dynamics in original essays by prominent researchers in cognitive science. Each chapter explores some aspect of the dynamics of cognitive processing while still retaining representations as the centerpiece of the explanations of the key phenomena. These chapters serve as an existence proof that representation is not incompatible with the dynamics of cognitive processing. The book is divided into sections on foundational issues about the use of representation in cognitive science, the dynamics of low level cognitive processes such as visual and auditory perception and simple lexical priming and the dynamics of higher cognitive processes including categorization, analogy and decision making.

Reading Between the Lines

Kenneth Brophy, 2015-10-05 Reading Between the Lines The Neolithic Cursus Monuments of Scotland is the first systematic analysis of Scotland's cursus monuments and is written by one of the foremost scholars of the Neolithic in Scotland. Drawing on fifteen years of experience of cropmark interpretation as well as his involvement in several excavations of cursus monuments and contemporary sites, Kenneth Brophy uncovers some of the secrets of the Neolithic landscape. While outlining the physical characteristics of the cursus, this book also addresses the limitations of this kind of typological description when applied to monuments which varied so remarkably in terms of materiality and size. Moving beyond a morphological account, Brophy considers what can be said of this diverse group of sites and how they were actually built and used in prehistory in light of several decades of aerial reconnaissance and excavation in Scotland. Through a close study of the differences as well as the similarities between these structures, this book offers a nuanced account of cursus monuments, finally allowing this important monument type to be better understood and placed alongside others of the period. Offering exciting new ways of thinking about these enigmatic yet important monuments, Reading Between the Lines The Neolithic Cursus Monuments of Scotland is an essential resource for students and specialists in British prehistory, providing an introduction to the Early Neolithic archaeology of lowland Scotland as well as a meditation on broader aspects of monumentality and architecture.

Pollution and Property Daniel H. Cole, 2002-07-18 Environmental protection and resource conservation depend on the imposition of property rights broadly defined because in the absence of some property system, private common or public resource degradation and depletion are inevitable. But there is no universal first best property regime for environmental protection in this second best world. Using case studies and examples taken from countries around the world, this 2002 book demonstrates that the choice of ownership institution is contingent upon institutional, technological, and ecological circumstances that determine the differential costs of instituting, implementing, and maintaining alternative regimes. Consequently, environmental protection is likely to be more effective and more efficient in a society that relies on multiple and often mixed property regimes. The book concludes with an assessment of the important contemporary issue of takings which arise when different property regimes collide.
