Searcy,2011-05-15 In The Life Giving Stone Michael Searcy provides a thought provoking ethnoarchaeological account of metate and mano manufacture marketing and use among Guatemalan Maya for whom these stone implements are still essential equipment in everyday life and diet Although many archaeologists have regarded these artifacts simply as common everyday tools and therefore unremarkable Searcy s methodology reveals how for the ancient Maya the manufacture and use of grinding stones significantly impacted their physical and economic welfare In tracing the life cycle of these tools from production to discard for the modern Maya Searcy discovers rich customs and traditions that indicate how metates and manos have continued to sustain life not just literally in terms of food but also in terms of culture His research is based on two years of fieldwork among three Mayan groups in which he documented behaviors associated with these tools during their procurement production acquisition use discard and re use Searcy s investigation documents traditional practices that are rapidly being lost or dramatically modified In few instances will it be possible in the future to observe metates and manos as central elements in household provisioning or follow their path from hand manufacture to market distribution and to intergenerational transmission In this careful inquiry into the cultural significance of a simple tool Searcy s ethnographic observations are guided both by an interest in how grinding stone traditions have persisted and how they are changing today and by the goal of enhancing the archaeological interpretation of these stones which were so fundamental to pre Hispanic agriculturalists with corn based cuisines Stones, Their Collection, Identification, and Uses Richard Vincent Dietrich,1980 Handbook and Descriptive Catalogue of the Collections of Gems and Precious Stones in the United States National Museum United States National Museum,George Perkins Merrill,1922 Gems, Granites, and Gravels R. Stone Tool Use at Cerros Suzanne M. Lewenstein, 2012-10-10 For centuries scholars have pondered and speculated over the uses of the chipped stone implements uncovered at archaeological sites Recently a number of researchers have attempted to determine prehistoric tool function through experimentation and through observation of the few remaining human groups who still retain this knowledge Learning how stone tools were made and used in the past can tell us a great deal about ancient economic systems exchange networks and the social and political structure of prehistoric societies Suzanne M Lewenstein used the artifacts from Cerros an important Late Preclassic 200 BC AD 200 Mayan site in northern Belize to study stone tool function Through a comprehensive program of experimentation with stone tool replicas she was able not only to infer the tasks performed by individual tool specimens but also to recognize a wide variety of past activities for which stone tools were used Unlike previous works that focused on hunter gatherer groups Stone Tool Use at Cerros is the first comprehensive experimental study of tool use in an agricultural society The lithic data are used in an economic interpretation of a lowland Mayan community within a hierarchically complex society Apart from its significance to Mayan studies this innovative work offers the beginnings of a reference collection of identifiable tool functions that may be documented for sedentary complex society It will be of major interest to all archaeologists and anthropologists as well as those interested in economic specialization and artisanry in complex societies
