

The succulent plants that have evolved to grow in low-water regions are eminently suited to Mediterranean climate gardening, that is, gardening in conditions which are similar to those in most but the extreme regions of Australia, as well as the temperate climate regions of the USA, Europe, Asia, South Africa and New Zealand. With increasing concern worldwide about diminishing water supplies, many foresee a gardening future in which low-water plants will be essential. Gardeners are combining low-water plants from all over the world into a new mix, creating intriguing new landscapes using plants that are both modest in their water needs and highly effective in the garden or in pots. Succulents fit that brief perfectly.

This is a practical guide to over 300 succulents, including the familiar and the less well known, supported by superb photographs, allowing readers to easily choose plants suitable for their particular conditions either as specimens or as part of an overall planting. A succulent can be found with a look to suit almost any garden brief, elemental and primitive, cheerful and colourful, modernistic and architectural.

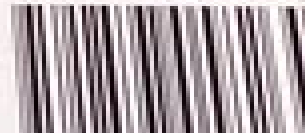

Succulents are clever plants—they have altered their skins, leaves, roots, their very shapes, to retain water. Both the novice and the connoisseur will be astonished by the beauty and range available. This is a practical book, giving tips for the successful cultivation of succulents, and information on those suitable for gardens large and small, hot, shady and frost prone, for courtyards and balconies, on types worth growing for flowers as well as shape, and suggestions for their use in parterres and patterns. The photographs illustrate succulents both as individual specimens and as part of overall plantings.

Display is a major contributor to the gardening pages of the Melbourne Age. Her knowledge and expertise in growing succulent plants developed from her desire to make the suntrap courtyard of her inner-city home an attractive feature and to create an easy-care garden around her windswept beach house. Display is a significant feature of her gardens, and the succulents she uses are chosen for their reliability, their beauty and their subtlety of colour and foliage.
