Stirring Performances:

Stirring Marko Zlokarnik, 2008-07-11 Stirring is one of the most important operations in process technology. No chemical exists that has not been submitted to a mixing process during its synthesis. Furthermore, stirring is important for the pharmaceutical and food industries too. The most important mixing operations are applied to homogenize miscible liquids to intensify the heat transfer between a liquid and the heat exchanger and to perform mass transfer in multiphase systems to whirl up solid particles in fluids and to disperse immiscible liquids. This book discusses in detail the above-listed operations, taking into consideration also different rheological behaviour of the system treated: Newtonian and non-Newtonian. For each stirring task, reliable scale-up rules are presented. In addition, mixing in pipes is discussed in great detail. Since there are so many aspects, it is almost impossible for the user to get and keep an overview. Therefore, this book presents more than 730 references and covers publications until the end of the year 2000 for everybody who needs to know more details.

Across the Great Divide Bronwen Douglas, 2013-12-19 Across the Great Divide tracks a Pacific historian's fruitful ambivalent engagements with History and Anthropology, anticipating experiments in each discipline with the other's theories and praxis. The revised and new essays comprising this collection provide systematic critiques of aspects of received scholarly wisdom about Oceania and are linked by reflexive commentaries addressing recent postcolonial concerns. A varied but coherent set of ethnographic and historical narratives about colonial encounters in Island Melanesia is informed by particular critical focus on the paradoxes and politics of knowing indigenous pasts through colonial texts.
