

promised seemed nearer than it had since she reached home.

All next day they talked over mother's idea, and in the evening the three children had a practice together, with mother at the piano. They soon found that they could get along very well with several simple hymns, and this made them full of eagerness to see what they could do outside.

A Missionary in India Tells a Group of Natives About Jesus

Two evenings later they started out. And what a happy time they did have! Barbara sang as she had never sung at home. She felt she was using her one talent for Jesus. People opened their windows to listen to the clear, musical little voice that rang out on the still evening air. Richard's voice was a wonderful help, and Benjie helped a lot, too. She knocked at the doors and told the story of how they were all trying to gather money so that their missionary would not have to be brought back from India. No one could resist her sweet little smile. At every house she received something. One lady gave five cents, another ten cents, and one happy old gentleman brought a quarter out of his trousers pocket.

When at last they all reached home, they were so excited and happy that mother scarcely knew what to do with them. After counting up their money, they found they had collected ninety-four cents.

"Why!" exclaimed Barbara, "we shall have to go out only three or four times to get more than I promised."

"It's wonderful," said mother. "I prayed that God would bless you tonight, and I am sure He has. That one talent came in useful, didn't it, Barbara?"

Barbara blushed a little.

"Anyway," she said, "I am glad I shall be able to keep my promise and have something to give Him after all."
