has come to dominate creole studies the debate over the role of universals and of specific substrata as competing explanations of the amazing similarities that creoles and perhaps pidgins also exhibit across the world Many describe the intense language contact within which language contraction and expansion occur they do this either directly or by supplying new data which will eventually feed such descriptions and and some are our belated response to calls which Reinecke made in the 1930s Fifty years ago he saw the need for the kind of comparative studies which are only now under way in for example Hazel Carter s paper which represents a pioneering attempt to compare the suprasegmentals of English based Creoles on both sides of the Atlantic In his last years Reinecke strongly supported research on contact languages with non European lexical bases He thought this was the area from which future creole studies would derive the greatest theoretical and practical gain and in this volume six papers answer his call by analyzing such pidgins and creoles
