too bright a pencil the reader will consider that after all there are many worse sins than a disposition to think and speak well of one's neighbors To admire and to love may now and then be tolerated as a variety as well as to carp and criticize America and England have heretofore abounded towards each other in illiberal criticisms There is not an unfavorable aspect of things in the old world which has not become perfectly familiar to us and a little of the other side may have a useful influence The writer has been decided to issue these letters principally however by the persevering and deliberate attempts in certain quarters to misrepresent the circumstances which are here given So long as these misrepresentations affected only those who were predetermined to believe unfavorably they were not regarded But as they have had some influence in certain cases upon really excellent and honest people it is desirable that the truth should be plainly told The object of publishing these letters is therefore to give to those who are true hearted and honest the same agreeable picture of life and manners which met the writer's own eyes She had in view a wide circle of friends throughout her own country between whose hearts and her own there has been an acquaintance and sympathy of years and who loving excellence and feeling the reality of it in themselves are sincerely pleased to have their sphere of hopefulness and charity enlarged For such this is written and if those who are not such begin to read let them treat the book as a letter not addressed to them which having opened by mistake they close and pass to the true owner The English reader is requested to bear in mind that the book has not been prepared in reference to an English but an American public and to make due allowance for that fact It would have placed the writer far more at ease had there been no prospect of publication in England As this however was unavoidable in some form the writer has chosen to issue it there under her own sanction There is one acknowledgment which the author feels happy to make and that is to those publishers in England Scotland France and Germany who have shown a liberality beyond the requirements of legal obligation The author hopes that the day is not far distant when America will reciprocate the liberality of other nations by granting to foreign authors those rights which her own receive from them The Journal which appears in the continental tour is from the pen of the Rev C Beecher The Letters were for the most part compiled from what was written at the time and on the spot Some few were entirely written after the author's return It is an affecting thought that several of the persons who appear in these letters as among the living have now passed to the great future The Earl of Warwick Lord Cockburn Judge Talfourd and Dr Wardlaw are no more among the ways of men Thus while we read while we write the shadowy procession is passing the good are being gathered into life and heaven enriched by the garnered treasures of earth

Tom s Cabin Harriet Beecher Stowe made three tours to England and Europe which inspired the two volume set Sunny Memories in Foreign Lands Both volumes are a series of letters some written on the spot some after the author s return to take up the conflict immediately but for my part I think otherwise What an unreasonable creature Does he suppose me so lost to all due sense of humility as to take out of his hands a cause which he is pleading so well If the plantation slaves had such a good friend as the Times and if every over worked female cotton picker could write as clever letters as this dressmaker s apprentice and get them published in as influential papers and excite as general a sensation by them as this seems to have done I think I should feel that there was no need of my interfering in a work so much better done Sunny
