to replace those that are old or diseased With the help of DNA chips medical researchers will soon be able to diagnose diseases such as cancer much more precisely and to tailor specific treatments for each patient Individualized medicine will also become an important part of the pharmaceutical world Many drugs will be prescribed based on information from DNA chips that identify which of a range of drugs is best for each patient as well as which drugs are likely to cause side effects The medicine of the post genomic era will be customized for a patient s genetic make up providing treatments based on a precise understanding of the mechanism of disease Life Script describes a future in which good health even perfect health may become the standard for everyone at every age
