F. Forest, Kevin Kinser, 2002-06-21 Surveys the changing landscape of American higher education from academic freedom to virtual universities from campus crime to Pell Grants from the Student Privacy Act to student diversity In the years following World War II college and university enrollment doubled students revolted faculty unionized and community colleges evolved Tuition and technology soared as did the number of first generation minority and women students These changes radically transformed the American system of postsecondary education Today that system is in trouble Its aging professoriate prepares for retirement but low academic salaries can no longer attract the best minds to replace them A flood of corporate dollars funds commercial research but money for basic research the seedbed of American scientific preeminence has dried up Colleges and universities also face heated competition with for profit education providers for students faculty and external financial support along with the costs of providing remedial education to growing numbers of students who are unprepared for postsecondary education Higher Education in the United States provides a comprehensive analysis of these issues and others that scholars and practitioners of higher education study discuss and grapple with on a daily basis The Condition of Teaching, 1988 This report is based on a national survey of 22 000 public school teachers The report reveals a growing gap between the school and the home and the majority of teachers report that the willingness of parents to be involved in their children's education falls below their expectations. In addition to the reporting of national trends the report allows an opportunity for state by state comparison of teacher attitudes on a broad range of topics current teaching assignments public school enrollment trends student achievement and growth expenditures for education teacher evaluation perspectives on methods and curriculum standards for students teacher preparation assessment of education officials and job satisfaction and morale It is noted in the foreword to the report that perhaps most significant in this survey is the frustration teachers feel about their powerlessness in teaching the majority of teachers are not asked to particiate in such crucial matters as teacher evaluation staff development school budget and student promotion and retention policies Technical notes and 83 tables are provided JD Teacher Preparation Initiatives United States. development Our Forgotten Children Julia M. Davis, 1990 Enduring Schools Rita S Brause, 2002-11-01 First Published in 2004 Enduring Schools Problems and Possibilities provides a compelling argument for school reform of greater magnitude than the classroom itself Based on twenty years of research and personal experiences this macro ethnography identifies the many influences on school practices which endure despite their detrimental effects on students and ultimately on society at large In our highly bureaucratized schools there is little time for significant learning or thinking Visionary teachers become discouraged and leave Students are mainly humiliated or ignored Only a few are intellectually challenged or respected Alienation boredom control and dependency are the real basics in most educational settings Learning which is implicitly at the heart of schooling is explicitly discussed as a highly complex phenomenon This perspective highlights how the enduring emphasis on control dependency and expedience denies students the challenging experiences essential to nurture their critical thinking But there are alternatives some of which are explicitly described Enduring Schools considers the perspectives of parents students teachers administrators architects school board members and school district officers This provocative report from an insider demands our immediate attention Final Report University of Wisconsin System.
