The Impact of New Health Imperatives on Educational Policy and Schooling Jan Wright, Valerie Harwood, 2016-02-05 Currently a great deal of public discourse around health is on the assumed relationship between childhood inactivity young people's diets and a putative steep rise in obesity Children and young people are increasingly being identified as a population at risk in relation to these health concerns Such concerns are driving what might be described as new health imperatives which prescribe the choices young people should make around lifestyle physical activity body regulation dietary habits and sedentary behaviour These health imperatives are a powerful force driving major policy initiatives on health and education in a number of countries in the Western world Schools in particular have been targeted for the implementation of a plethora of initiatives designed to help children and young people lose weight become more active and change their eating patterns inside and outside school Addressing these issues requires an innovative theoretical approach Neither the fields of eating disorders nor obesity research has addressed these issues from a sociological and pedagogical perspective The contributors to this edited collection draw on a range of social theories including Michel Foucault and Basil Bernstein to interpret the data collected across three countries Australia and New Zealand United Kingdom and from a range of primary and secondary schools Each chapter addresses various aspects of the relationship between health imperatives as constituted in government policies school programs and practices their recontextualised in school practices and the impact of this on the subjectivities of children and teachers This book was originally published as a special issue of Discourse Studies in the Cultural Politics of Education

Youth Sport in Australia Steve Georgakis, Kate Russell, 2011-03-15 Youth Sport in Australia explores the history and policy development of youth sport in the Australian context the role of sport and physical education in private and public schools and community clubs

A Student-centred Sociology of Australian Education Tiffany Jones, 2020-01-03 This book is based on a comparative study from 2018 of four different approaches to education according to 2 500 Australians experiences of them on a range of topics It shows that whilst the critical approach has strong research based support across the board sometimes a liberal conservative or post modern approach may have some merit for certain outcomes This is a book about challenging our biases and calling on ourselves to aim higher for education than what our own pre conceived ideas might allow What and who is valued in education and the social roles and identity messages learned differ wildly from school to school Education is most impacted by the orientation of education dominant in that context whether conservative liberal critical or post modern These terms are often used with little practical data on the real life schooling they entail Who learns what in which approach Who learns best with which approach on which topic and why This book provides this previously missing information It offers holistic detailed descriptions of conservative liberal critical and post modern approaches to education broadly It provides statistics and stories from real students on how the four approaches work practically in schools in relation to age gender sexuality social class race news media popular culture and technology Chapters offer background information to the four perspectives data from student participants tutorial questions and activities and suggestions for further reading
