Teaching The Chinese Learner:

Teaching the Chinese Learner David A. Watkins, John Burville Biggs, 2001 This is a sequel to The Chinese learner co published with the Comparative Education Research Centre in Hong Kong in 1996 This book extends the earlier work by focusing on the work of teachers It analyses the ways in which Chinese teachers think about their teaching and identifies differences in approach

Revisiting The Chinese Learner Carol K.K. Chan, Nirmala Rao, 2010-03-10 It is seventeen years since I first formulated The paradox of the Chinese learner in a conference in Kathmandu Nepal My original formulation of the paradox was that westerners saw Chinese students as rote learning massive amounts of information in fierce exam dominated classrooms yet in international comparisons students in the Confucian heritage classrooms greatly outperformed western students learning in progressive western classrooms This seeming paradox raised all sorts of questions to which many others have contributed important answers especially that by Ference Marton on how Chinese learners construed the roles of memory and understanding in ways that were foreign to typical western educators Much of this work was brought together in The Chinese Learner 1996 edited by David Watkins and myself That work raised more questions still especially about educational contexts beliefs and practices which were investigated in contributions to Teaching the Chinese Learner 2001 And now we have Revisiting the Chinese Learner which is a very timely collection of excellent contributions that take into account the many changes that have taken place since 2001 changes such as 1 The globalisation of education especially through educational technology and enormous socio economic changes especially in China itself 2 Changes in educational policy aims curriculum and organisation and decentralisation of educational decision making in many Confucian heritage cultures 3

The Chinese Learner David A. Watkins, John Burville Biggs, 1996 Paints a clear research based picture of how Chinese students and their teachers see the context of their learning both in Hong Kong and abroad The focus of much of this research is the question How can Chinese learners be so successful academically

Learning and Teaching in the Chinese Classroom Shane N. Phillipson, Bick-har Lam, 2011-10-01 A major concern of all education authorities around the world is the challenge that schools face in catering for learner diversity That this concern is shared by authorities in East Asia including the Education Bureau EDB of Hong Kong is surprising given the high academic achievement of students from this part of the world This book helps to meet this challenge for teachers in East Asia by focusing on specific research that helps explain the basis for diversity in the Chinese learner Although there are many textbooks that cover the basic principles of educational psychology few do not focus on the Chinese learner This book makes the link between the broad field of educational psychology and how these theories contribute to our understanding of the Chinese learner This book is unique in that it draws on recent research to illustrate the application of these theories thereby helping teachers and students in teacher education programmes understand the variability in student achievement Our book is based on the idea that the Chinese context is in many ways different to other cultural contexts and that teachers can make a difference to the outcomes of student learning We also draw on our many years of experience in educating future teachers where our students want us to focus on the Chinese classroom Our student teachers also want to be educated by professors who are themselves researchers In drawing on research about the Chinese learner we also bring to our student teachers the richness and value of educational research We also encourage our student teachers to think of themselves as professional researchers in terms of developing an understanding of the research literature and in finding solutions to their classroom problems

Teaching and Learning Chinese in Global Contexts Linda Tsung, Ken Cruickshank, 2010-11-11 Although there is an extensive literature on the teaching of English as a Second or Other Language there is very little published research on the teaching or learning of Chinese in similar contexts This book is the first to bring together research into the teaching and learning of Chinese as a foreign language to non native speakers as a second language to minority groups and as a heritage community language in the diaspora The volume showcases the contribution of researchers working in such areas as language teaching and learning policy development language assessment language development bilingualism all within the context of Chinese as a Second or Other Language This is an exciting extension of teaching research beyond the traditional TESOL field and will be of interest to researchers and practitioners working in applied linguistics and Chinese language education worldwide learners at all levels have taken advantage of these opportunities and have been scrutinized in the process. The results of this internationalization have in some cases solidified stereotypes about Chinese learners and in other instances have helped to overcome those prejudices. Teachers within the international schools comment about the challenges of integrating students from different ethnic and national backgrounds in their schools and about the rewards of developing intercultural programs that will give the students the most substantial diverse and ethical education and encourage cross cultural understanding, build academic skills and develop character. University teachers both Chinese and Western describe the opportunities and challenges for cross cultural teaching and learning within the classrooms of their own countries and in global classrooms where local and international teachers together advance new perspectives based on team teaching, interdisciplinarity and intercultural enquiry. Teachers within international schools and university and school teachers who teach exchange students and other international students will find the understanding, experiences and practical advice to be of help in their own teaching, but those within international business communities may well find the research helpful in understanding their own intercultural environments. Janette Ryan is a lecturer in education at Monash University. She specializes in cross cultural teaching and teaching for international students. She is a Mandarin Chinese speaker and works with a network of schools and universities across China on curriculum reform and professional learning communities. Gordon Slethaug is a visiting professor in English studies and communications at the University of Southern Denmark and has previously been professor of English at the University of Waterloo, Canada and director of American Studies at the University of Hong Kong. He has recently been visiting Lingnan professor at the University of Hong Kong and Sun Yat sen University in China and senior Fulbright professor at the University of Southern Denmark.

Teaching and Learning Chinese as a Second or Foreign Language Ko-Yin Sung, 2019-10-23. Teaching and Learning Chinese as a Second or Foreign Language edited by Ko Yin Sung addresses three emerging themes in the field of Chinese language teaching and learning: 1. Increasingly ubiquitous in all language learning and teaching and for the learning of Chinese as a second language in particular, information and communication technology (ICT) can serve as an important and effective tool. Several chapters focus on how certain emerging ICT tools are applied in teaching and learning Chinese as a second language. 2. Due to China's economic and political influence, the number of students of all ages studying Chinese as a second language but especially young learners has increased in many parts of the world. Despite this, the research into teaching Chinese to young learners has lagged behind. Several chapters investigate young learners' motivations and effective methods for assisting them to master the Chinese language. 3. The writing system of the Chinese language poses many challenges for learners, especially those more familiar with alphabetical languages. In light of this difficulty in learning Chinese characters, some of the chapters identify effective teaching and learning strategies to master the Chinese language.
