Morphology and its Interfaces in Second Language Knowledge Maria-Luise Beck, 1998-12-15 This volume treats the connection between syntax and morphology with a focus on L2 acquisition This interface has been a matter of considerable interest in theoretical circles ever since Chomsky 1994 and others argued that morphological parameters form the primary locus of cross linguistic variation As might be expected generative theorists working in the area of language acquisition have responded to this argument with various analyses L2 research is no exception A variety of researchers have begun serious explorations on the ways in which morphology may or may not trigger variation not only in syntax but also in argument structure The volume thus brings together a concentrated research effort on the topic from an L2 perspective The volume starts off with a comprehensive introduction to the various sub topics and ends with an extensive index

Studies in African Linguistic Typology F. K. Erhard Voeltz, 2006-03-22 The twenty one papers that make up this volume reflect the broad perspective of African linguistic typology studies today Where previous volumes would present language material from a very restricted area and perspective the present contributions reflect the global interest and orientation of current African linguistic studies The studies are nearly all implicational in nature Based upon a detailed survey of a particular linguistic phenomenon in a given language or language area conclusions are drawn about the general nature about this phenomenon in the languages of Africa and beyond They represent as such a first step that may ultimately lead to a more thorough understanding of African linguistic structures This approach is well justified Taking the other road attempting to pick out linguistic details from often fairly superficially documented languages runs the risk that the data and its implications for the structure investigated might be misunderstood Consequentially only very few studies of this nature giving the very broad perspective the overview of a particular structure type covering the whole African continent are represented here
