Longwood in Natchez Mississippi is a celebration of American eccentricity Dr Haller Nutt who made a fortune in cotton during the pre Civil War boom wanted a home that would be different one with character His dream was romantic to evoke past cultures by using the best from any era A Philadelphia architect Samuel Sloan published a work in 1851 called The Model Architect which featured an Oriental Villa in octagonal form with a Byzantine Moorish dome on top Using this design Sloan set about to create a magnificent mansion for Nutt In April 1861 Nutt s dreams were smashed by the Civil War Construction on the mansion came to a halt as the northern workers abruptly dropped their tools and returned to their homes Many of the tools are still in the unfinished interior exactly as they were left Local laborers completed the basement portion of Longwood It was here the Nutt family lived while the Civil War swirled across the South Dr Nutt died in 1864 Seemingly lost from reality today Longwood is the picturesque shell of one of America s most bizarre houses a wonderful example of architectural folly and 19th century mentality      Dixon Family History Mary Gant Bell, 2007-07
