Gunnion, 2009-05 It is somewhat difficult to imagine the need for and reliance on the blacksmith by the rural community of 200 years past The smith combined the work of the welding shop the service station and the hardware store in one man Every community however small had need of one and as a result there were greater numbers of smiths than of any other craftsmen during the 18th and 19th cent This is the catalog of a special exhibition showing tools and implements collected by Henry and George Landis late in the 19th century They gave a priority to the tools and products of early craftsmen especially the blacksmith The catalog includes an introduction to the work and importance of blacksmiths Includes over 100 photos Colonial Wrought Iron Don Plummer, 1999 Colonial Wrought Iron is a photographic survey of early wrought iron work in America with 506 photographs from the Sorber Collection The colonial period in America was centered around the blacksmith who was the maker and creator of these items The informational text explains the characteristics and the conditions of the period in which the iron was forged Colonial Wrought Iron is an invaluable resource tool for the blacksmith involved making reproduction hardware and related items as well as an inspiration for merging form and function In this book you will find the commonplace and the ornate but they all reflect the hand of fine craftsmanship The work displayed in Colonial Wrought Iron is from the collection of Jim Sorber Jim now in his eighties has been an avid collector for 70 years This collection is a result of a life steeped in an enduring appreciation for the skills of his ancestors Even as a child he was interested in their hand tools and the wonderful things they made That interest soon grew into a passion A unique aspect of Jims collection is that it reflects a certain ethnic influence Much of his collecting has been done near his home in the counties of Berks Chester Lancaster Lebanon Lehigh Montgomery and Schuylkill This area has been settled by German immigrants since the mid to late 17th century Jims collection many pieces of which are signed and dated reflects an iron chronicle of the Pennsylvania Dutch migration westward from the Philadelphia area Publications of the American Folklife Center, 1977 *The blacksmith artisan within the early community. Carolina Backcountry Johanna Miller Lewis,2021-12-14 During the quarter of a century before the thirteen colonies became a nation the northwest quadrant of North Carolina had just begun to attract permanent settlers This seemingly primitive area may not appear to be a likely source for attractive pottery and ornate silverware and furniture much less for an audience to appreciate these refinements Yet such crafts were not confined to urban centers and artisans like other colonists were striving to create better lives for themselves as well as to practice their trades As Johanna Miller Lewis shows in this pivotal study of colonial history and material culture the growing population of Rowan County required not only blacksmiths saddlers and tanners but also a great variety of skilled craftsmen to help raise the standard of living Rowan County s rapid expansion was in part the result of the planned settlements of the Moravian Church Because the Moravians maintained careful records historians have previously credited church artisans with greater skill and more economic awareness than non church craftsmen Through meticulous attention to court and private records deeds wills and other sources Lewis reveals the Moravian failure to keep up with the pace of development occurring elsewhere in the county Challenging the traditional belief that southern backcountry life was primitive Lewis shows that many artisans held public office and wielded power in the public sphere She also examines women weavers and spinsters as an integral part of the population All artisans Moravian and non Moravian male and female helped the local market economy expand to include coastal and trans Atlantic trade Lewis s book contributes meaningfully to the debate over self sufficiency and capitalism in rural America

Diane Barnes, 2008-06-01 Though deeply entrenched in antebellum life the artisans who lived and worked in Petersburg Virginia in the 1800s including carpenters blacksmiths coach makers bakers and other skilled craftsmen helped transform their planter centered agricultural community into one of the most industrialized cities in the Upper South These mechanics as the artisans called themselves successfully lobbied for new railroad lines and other amenities they needed to open their factories and shops and turned a town whose livelihood once depended almost entirely on tobacco exports into a bustling modern city In Artisan Workers in the Upper South L Diane Barnes closely examines the relationships between Petersburg's skilled white free black and slave mechanics and the roles they played in southern Virginia's emerging market economy Barnes demonstrates that despite studies that emphasize the backwardness of southern development modern industry and the institution of slavery proved quite compatible in the Upper South Petersburg joined the industrialized world in part because of the town's proximity to northern cities and resources but it succeeded because its citizens capitalized on their uniquely southern resource slaves Petersburg artisans realized quickly that owning slaves could increase the profitability of their businesses and these artisans including some free African Americans entered the master class when they could Slave owning mechanics both white and black gained wealth and status in society and they soon joined an emerging middle class Not all mechanics could afford slaves however and those who could not struggled to survive in the new economy Forced to work as journeymen and face the unpleasant reality of permanent wage labor the poorer mechanics often resented their inability to prosper like their fellow artisans These differing levels of success Barnes shows created a sharp class divide that rivaled the racial divide in the artisan community Unlike their northern counterparts who united as a political force and organized strikes to effect change artisans in the Upper South did not rise up in protest against the prevailing social order Skilled white mechanics championed free manual labor a common refrain of northern artisans but they carefully limited the term free to whites and simultaneously sought alliances with slaveholding planters Even those artisans who didn't own slaves Barnes explains rarely criticized the wealthy planters who not only employed and traded with artisans but also controlled both state and local politics Planters too guarded against disparaging free labor too loudly and their silence together with that of the mechanics helped maintain the precariously balanced social structure Artisan Workers in the Upper South rejects the notion of the antebellum South as a semifeudal planter centered political economy and provides abundant evidence that some areas of the South embraced industrial capitalism and economic modernity as readily as communities in the North

Rural Space in the Middle Ages and Early Modern Age Albrecht Classen, 2012-05-29 Older research on the premodern world limited its focus on the Church the court and more recently on urban space The present volume invites readers to consider the meaning of rural space both in light of ecocritical readings and social historical approaches While previous scholars examined the figure of the peasant in the premodern world the current volume combines a large number of specialized studies that investigate how the natural environment and the appearance of members of the rural population interacted with the world of the court and of the city The experience in rural space was important already for writers and artists in the premodern era as the large variety of scholarly approaches indicates The present volume signals how much the surprisingly close interaction between members of the aristocratic and of the peasant class determined many literary and art historical works In a surprisingly large number of cases we can even discover elements of utopia hidden in rural space We also observe how much the rural world was a significant element already in early medieval mentality Moreover as many authors point out the impact of natural forces on premodern society was tremendous if not catastrophic Roman Artisans and the Urban Economy Cameron Hawkins, 2016-07-19 This book offers the first comprehensive study of economic conditions and economic life in Roman cities during the late Republic and early Empire By employing a sophisticated methodology based upon comparative evidence and contemporary economic theory the author develops interlocking arguments about the relationship between four key attributes of urban economic life in Roman antiquity the nature and magnitude of consumer demand the structure of urban labour markets the strategies devised by urban artisans in their efforts to navigate their social and economic environments and the factors that served to limit both the overall performance of the Roman economy and its potential for intensive growth While the author's methodology and conclusions will be of particular interest to specialists in economic history other readers will profit from his discussion of topics such as slavery and manumission the economic significance of professional associations and the impact of gender on economic behaviour The
