On Bicycles Evan Friss, 2019-05-07 Subways and yellow taxis may be the icons of New York transportation but it is the bicycle that has the longest claim to New York's streets two hundred years and counting Never has it taken to the streets without controversy 1819 was the year of the city's first bicycle and also its first bicycle ban Debates around the bicycle's place in city life have been so persistent not just because of its many uses recreation sport transportation business but because of changing conceptions of who cyclists are In On Bicycles Evan Friss traces the colorful and fraught history of cycling in New York City He uncovers the bicycle's place in the city over time showing how it has served as a mirror of the city's changing social economic infrastructural and cultural politics since it first appeared It has been central as when horse drawn carriages shared the road with bicycle lanes in the 1890s peripheral when Robert Moses's car centric vision made room for bicycles only as recreation and aggressively marginalized when Ed Koch's battle against bike messengers culminated in the short lived 1987 Midtown Bike Ban On Bicycles illuminates how the city as we know it today veined with over a thousand miles of bicycle lanes reflects a fitful journey powered and opposed by New York City's people and its politics

Bicycling for Transportation Melissa Bopp, Dangaia Sims, Daniel Piatkowski, 2018-04-16 Bicycling for Transportation examines the individual and societal factors of active transportation and biking behavior The book uses an Interdisciplinary approach to provide a comprehensive overview of bicycling for transportation research It examines the variability in biking participation among different demographic groups and the multiple levels of influence on biking to better inform researchers and practitioners on the effective use of community resources programming and policymaking It is an ideal resource for public health professionals trying to encourage physical activity through biking In addition it makes the case for new infrastructure that supports these initiatives Provides evidence based insights on cost effective interventions for improving biking participation Includes numerous case studies and best practices that highlight multi level approaches in a variety of settings Explores individual and social factors related to biking behavior such as race gender and self efficacy just a vehicle used to transport ourselves to exercise one's body or to obtain joy. It's a device which allows us to attain a much wealthier mental state than one would think possible. Once we ride it, it's possible to experience a feeling close to that achieved by meditation. The movements of the legs, the energy which arises through the body, the cadence of our breathing and the floating attention on what's happening around us and in our mind all create a similar state to the one we achieve when we sit cross-legged with our eyes closed, allowing our thoughts to drift simply and naturally. Zen calls it mindfulness.

Promoting Healthy Living in Latin America and the Caribbean María Eugenia Bonilla-Chacín, 2013-12-24. The Latin American and Caribbean region has been undergoing a rapid demographic and epidemiological transition which has had important health and economic consequences. Not only is the population aging rapidly, it is also experiencing major lifestyle changes. These changes in turn have altered the disease and mortality profile of the region, resulting in a greater weight of noncommunicable diseases such as heart disease, stroke, cancer, and diabetes within the overall disease burden. As they affect more and more people, noncommunicable diseases pose a growing economic and development threat to households, health systems, and economies. Part of this health and economic burden can be avoided, however. An important share of such diseases is attributable to preventable risk factors such as an unhealthy diet, physical inactivity, tobacco use, and alcohol abuse, the leading health risk factors in most of the region. This book outlines the design and implementation of policies that would promote healthy living in the region, thus effectively preventing premature mortality from noncommunicable diseases. Reducing the exposure to these risk factors at the society level requires the concerted effort of stakeholders from a variety of sectors; therefore, the decision-making process presents challenges to policy makers and other health advocates. International experience has shown that overcoming these challenges often requires negotiation and dialogue among all interested parties, the mobilization of public opinion, reliance on information and research, the leadership and political commitment of key political figures, and institutional arrangements that favor multisectoral coordination and take advantage of favorable conditions among others.
