ILLUSTRATIONS continue to build a 24-hour opportunity shop managers as people continue to help themselves to donations left on the street.

St Vincent de Paul Maine's December shop-manager Chris Heale has expressed disappointment with a small number of local community members who took advantage of the donations bins were raided over the weekend.

Ms Heale said while staff were unable to attend to and empty the donation bins over the weekend, people were helping themselves to bags of donations left on the footpath with clothes racks across the street.

"Unfortunately once those bags are open and spread out onto the footpath where they are, it's dangerous for them to be stolen and we have to throw them away," she said.

"This then affects a lot of money which we do pay forward by feeding the poor, homeless and those in need."

She said funds made by the shop were given, raised towards helping people in need and volunteers loved community members handing over donations.
