The Blessed Trade:

Daughters of the Trade Pernille Ipsen, 2015-01-20 Severine Brock's first language was Ga yet it was not surprising when in 1842 she married Edward Carstensen. He was the last governor of Christiansborg the fort that in the eighteenth century had been the center of Danish slave trading in West Africa. She was the descendant of Ga speaking women who had married Danish merchants and traders. Their marriage would have been familiar to Gold Coast traders going back nearly 150 years. In Daughters of the Trade Pernille Ipsen follows five generations of marriages between African women and Danish men revealing how interracial marriage created a Euro African hybrid culture specifically adapted to the Atlantic slave trade. Although interracial marriage was prohibited in European colonies throughout the Atlantic world in Gold Coast slave trading towns it became a recognized and respected custom. Cassare or keeping house gave European men the support of African women and their kin which was essential for their survival and success while African families made alliances with European traders and secured the legitimacy of their offspring by making the unions official. For many years Euro African families lived in close proximity to the violence of the slave trade. Sheltered by their Danish names and connections they grew wealthy and influential. But their powerful position on the Gold Coast did not extend to the broader Atlantic world where the link between blackness and slavery grew stronger and where Euro African descent did not guarantee privilege. By the time Severine Brock married Edward Carstensen their world had changed. Daughters of the Trade uncovers the vital role interracial marriage played in the coastal slave trade the production of racial difference and the increasing stratification of the early modern Atlantic world.

The Capital Market of Manila and the Pacific Trade, 1668-1838 Juan José Rivas Moreno, 2024-10-19 Economic history has always emphasized the importance of long distance trade in the emergence of modern financial markets yet almost nothing is known about the Manila trade This book offers the first reconstruction of the capital market of Manila using new archival sources that have never been used in the economic history of Pacific trade The book explains how trade between Asia and Spanish America across the Pacific which lasted for 250 years 1571-1815 was financed from the city of Manila The book analyses the political economy and institutional structures of the Manila capital market in the context of the global silver trade as well as addressing key similarities and differences with European trade routes and differing approaches to colonialism and commerce in Asian waters It traces how the Manila capital market emerged in a bottom up process with a redistributive aspect that tied the interests of citizens with the fortunes of trade using institutions familiar to the public like legacy funds brotherhoods and lay religious orders to pool liquidity originate working capital and internalise the risk of loss at sea It challenges the notion that there is a normative model for the development of capital markets and introduces an industrial organisation analysis to the broader structure of Early Modern trade in the Spanish Empire Sitting at the intersection of economic and financial history global history imperial history and political economy this book will be a cutting edge and valuable resource for a broad range of scholars The Heavenly Trade, Or, The Best Merchandizing Bartholomew
