

HAYDEN CARRUTH

The Bloomingdale Papers

The University of Georgia Press announces the publication of Hayden Carruth's The Bloomingdale Papers as the tenth volume in its Contemporary Poetry Series. While a patient at Bloomingdale asylum in the early 1950s, Mr. Carruth composed this compelling poetic sequence and sent a copy of it to his friend Albert Christ-Janer. Twenty years later Christ-Janer brought this lost and nearly forgotten manuscript to the University of Georgia Press. A copy of the poem was then sent to the poet, who eventually agreed to its publication, partly because friends persuaded him to do so and partly because he believed that its total effect was what it should be, the truth of a spirit caged and struggling. The Bloomingdale Papers is now presented as the earliest of the poet's published work.

"Some of the finest and most moving poetry of one of the best writers and profoundest minds of our time and place"—Denise Levetov.

"Tragically authentic"—Kirkus Reviews.
