Geological and Natural History Survey,1914 Habitat Capability Model for Birds Wintering in the Black Hills, South Dakota Mark A. Rumble,1999 Habitat models have considerable economic effects on management decisions and are used to predict consequences of land management decisions on wildlife The Black Hills National Forest uses the habitat capability model HABCAP but its accuracy relative to resident wintering bird populations is largely unknown We tested the model s predictive accuracy for resident nongame birds wintering in 11 vegetation structural stages of ponderosa pine quaking aspen paper birch and meadows in the Black Hills South Dakota Six species hairy woodpecker gray jay black capped chickadee white breasted nuthatch red breasted nuthatch and dark eyed junco had HABCAP coefficients for vegetation structural stages during winter Red crossbills were not previously included in the model so we developed HABCAP coefficients for them Predicted abundance of winter birds in vegetation structural stages based on HABCAP coefficients differed from observed abundance for gray jays black capped chickadees white breasted nuthatches red breasted nuthatches and dark eyed juncos HABCAP coefficients were modified to reflect observed abundance patterns of birds These changes to HABCAP coefficients should provide managers with more appropriate estimates of land management impacts on nongame birds wintering in the Black Hills

Native Woodlands and Birds of South Dakota Mark A. Rumble, 1998 Eighty four percent of the upland bird species in present day bird counts along the Missouri River were included in bird species lists 150 years ago Eighty three percent of upland bird species in the Slim Buttes area also occurred 80 to 120 years ago Historical photographs show native woodlands were part of the presettlement landscape Expansion of the ranges of blue jays common grackles and eastern phoebes in western South Dakota can be attributed to tree plantings cultivation and urbanization rather than expanded native woodlands

A Field Guide to Western Birds' Nests Hal H. Harrison, 1979 The nests and eggs of all the common birds found west of the Mississippi are covered in detail 520 species in all More than 400 photographs show the nests and eggs in their typical habitats Descriptive text includes color shape and number of eggs for each species plus information on nesting materials construction and dimensions
