The New York Charities Directory, 1909 The View from Vermont Blake A. Harrison, 2006 With its small native population proximity to major metropolitan areas and bucolic rural beauty Vermont was fated to be a tourist mecca forever associated in the popular imagination with maple syrup fall colors and ski bunnies Tourism for good and ill has always been the decisive factor in the conception of rural Vermont What is surprising however is the degree to which we have accepted this notion of rural Vermont as a somehow timeless entity Blake Harrison's rich and rewarding study instead presents the construction of Vermont's landscape as a complex and ever changing dynamic informed by progressive modernist and reformist thought competing views of economic expansion rural and urban prejudice and social exclusion and more recently by land use planning and environmentalism This broad based study includes the early history of Vermont tourism the concomitant abandonment of farms with the rise of the summer home the creation of an unspoiled Vermont from billboards at least the impact of Vermont's ski industry on tradition bound tourism and later efforts to legislate growth and protect an increasingly static ideal of a rural Vermont While grounded within a specific Vermont view Harrison has much to contribute to broader studies of rural places tourism and landscapes in American culture His analysis of how physical landscapes affect and are affected by our imagined landscape and the insight afforded by his juxtaposition of leisure and labor will deeply inform our understanding of rural tourist landscapes for years to come This is a truly interdisciplinary work that will satisfy and challenge historians and geographers alike Martens and Fishers (Martes) in Human-Altered Environments Daniel J. Harrison, Angela K. Fuller, Gilbert Proulx, 2006-02-28 Martens and Fishers Martes in Human Altered Environments An International Perspective examines the conditions where humans and martens are compatible and incompatible and promotes land use practices that allow Martes to be representatively distributed and viable All Martes have been documented to use forested habitats and 6 species excluding the stone marten are generally considered to require complex mid to late successional forests throughout much of their geographic ranges All species in the genus require complex horizontal and vertical structure to provide escape cover protection from predators habitat for their prey access to food resources and protection from the elements Martens and the fisher have high metabolic rates have large spatial requirements have high surface area to volume ratios for animals that often inhabit high latitudes and often require among the largest home range areas per unit body weight of any group of mammals Resulting from these unique life history characteristics this genus is particularly sensitive to human influences on their habitats including habitat loss stand scale simplification of forest structure via some forms of logging and landscape scale effects of habitat fragmentation Given their strong associations with structural complexity in forests martens and the fisher are often considered as useful barometers of forest health and have been used as ecological indicators flagship and umbrella species in different parts of the world Thus efforts to successfully conserve and manage martens and fishers are associated with the ecological fates of other forest dependent species and can greatly influence ecosystem integrity within forests that are increasingly shared among wildlife and humans We have made great strides in our fundamental understanding of how animals with these unique life history traits perceive and utilize habitats respond to habitat change and how their populations function and perform under different forms of human management and mismanagement This knowledge enhances our basic understanding of all species of Martes and will help us to achieve the goal of conserving viable populations and representative distributions of the world s Martes their habitats and associated ecological communities in our new millennium Zion's Home Monthly ,1894 Living
