The eye is a complex organ that allows us to see. It consists of several parts, including the cornea, lens, and retina. The cornea is the front part of the eye that helps to focus light. The lens is a small, clear structure that can change shape to focus light on the retina. The retina is the back part of the eye that contains light-sensitive cells that send signals to the brain.

There are two types of light-sensitive cells in the retina: rods and cones. Rods are responsible for vision in low light conditions, while cones are responsible for color vision. The brain interprets the signals from these cells to create the image we see.
