Women in Neoliberal Postfeminist Television Drama Cat Mahoney, 2019-11-07 In this insightful book Cat Mahoney offers a fascinating analysis of contemporary TV dramas such as Home Fires Land Girls and The Bletchley Circle Developing the idea that history is told through the preoccupations of the present she argues compellingly that these are postfeminist dramas which work through troubling ideas about heteronormative romance domesticity beauty and whiteness while reinforcing the idea that feminism as a political movement is not necessary A bold and original contribution to television studies gender studies and popular history Rosalind Gill City University of London UK By examining contemporary television drama set during and immediately after the Second World War this book illustrates the ways in which postfeminism has shaped representations of women in contemporary culture Mahoney offers a new perspective to debates that have previously been concerned with questions of historical accuracy She argues that depictions of women from the past in modern television drama spawn from the neoliberal postfeminist media climate which originated in the 1990s These depictions respond to a cultural need to naturalise and de historicise a version of neoliberal postfeminist femininity that is compatible with the current media climate and far more reflective of the concerns of the present than any real or lived experience of women in the past The result of this process of naturalisation is the assertion that postfeminist values are natural and eternal rather than a product of the 1980s economic turn and the present political moment By identifying and interrogating postfeminist norms within four television drama series produced since the 2008 financial crash this book argues that postfeminism is a dominant structuring force in their depiction of female characters and of the past shines a light on women's lives in and around the English town of Watford in the home and at work in traditional rural employment or in dressmaking textiles and the silk industry. The lives of local women are put into the context of the national movement to address inequality and injustice highlighting the often difficult existences of those employed in domestic service the impact of poor housing and terrible poverty on women efforts to redress the situation and changes in social hierarchy. Individual stories show that there were opportunities for women to take control of their lives some excelling as entrepreneurs owning shops pubs and other businesses. During this time of immense social change pioneering women within the community set the example for others to follow whether as political activists and suffragettes connecting with the feminist issues of their times or as prominent members of the community dedicating their lives to the needs of others. The region was notable for fostering the talents of numerous prominent artists Lucy Kemp Welch the illustrator of Black Beauty and creator of many recognizable war propaganda posters being the most famous and women in the sciences such as Harriette Chick who worked in the Lister Institute in Elstree. Also addressed in this book are the growth of education for girls and how contributions during times of crisis from nursing to wartime factory work led to the reappraisal of the role of women in postwar Britain.
