The L The Development Of Chicagos Rapid Transit System 1888193:

The "L" Bruce Moffat,1995 Chicago's Lost "L"s David Sadowski,2021-07-12 Chicago s system of elevated railways known locally as the L has run continuously since 1892 and like the city has never stood still It helped neighborhoods grow brought their increasingly diverse populations together and gave the famous Loop its name But today s system has changed radically over the years Chicago s Lost Ls tells the story of former lines such as Garfield Park Humboldt Park Kenwood Stockyards Normal Park Westchester and Niles Center It was once possible to take high speed trains on the L directly to Aurora Elgin and Milwaukee Wisconsin The L started out as four different companies two starting out using steam engines instead of electricity Eventually all four came together via the Union Loop The L is more than a way of getting around Its trains are a place where people meet and interact Some say the best way to experience the city is via the L with its second story view Chicago s Lost Ls is virtually a secret history of Chicago and this is your ticket The Chicago "L" Greg Borzo,2007 Offers a history of the world famous Chicago L the elevated railroad that has operated since 1892 and has been ridden by more than ten billion people The Story of the Chicago Rapid Transit Lines Elevated Railway Employees. because large parts of the system are elevated portions of the network are underground at grade level or open cut On average 722 782 people ride the L each weekday 483 177 each Saturday and 414 512 each Sunday Annual ridership for 2006

Charles Keagle Mohler,1912 Metropolitan Transit Research Chicago Transit Authority,1957 Estimating the Impacts of Route Changes for Chicago's Rapid Transit System Ari T. Ofsevit,2019 The Chicago Transit Authority is the second largest transit agency in the US and the CTA's rail transit division currently serves nearly half of the rides in the system The system is adaptable to changes in population and ridership demand most lines can be run either across the original Loop L elevated lines or through the mid 20th Century era subways with the additional option for lines on the Loop of either running back to their originating terminal or through the downtown to a terminal elsewhere in the system Ridership has grown significantly in recent decades but the current route structure is not optimized for current demand leading to portions of the system which are underutilized and others which are overburdened and congested As ridership has grown congestion has increased on certain portions of the system especially on the Loop where up to 35 trains per hour are run on certain line segments Yet in the subways below some tracks see as few as 10 trains per hour during the same time period This research will investigate means of reducing this congestion and improve service and analyze and recommend several routing alternatives which would reallocate some resources from the Loop L to the subways reducing congestion on the Loop while maintaining or increasing overall throughput through the downtown area While long term growth may require additional capital resources this research proposes low cost operational changes which will not require significant new structures stations yards or equipment outlay The analysis breaks down current passenger use to estimate the travel time impacts of various alternatives for passengers and the potential to draw new ridership to the system the operational impacts congestion and delay reduction yard operations safety etc and cost to the agency and how these changes may be piloted implemented and further evaluated in concert with the agency's planned capital improvements to keep pace with growing demand at peak times The results of this research show that there are benefits to both congestion and passenger travel from running less service all the way around the elevated Loop and adding more thru routing service patterns Congestion is reduced by removing some trains from the most congested portions of the elevated structure and reallocating them to existing capacity in the subway Passengers benefit as fewer transfers are required between lines and more locations are accessible via direct one seat rides While this represents a significant departure in route structure from the current Loop operation where four of the five lines operating on the Loop make a full circuit and return to their original terminal there are measurable benefits for both passengers and operations The New Traction Ordinance Chicago (Ill.).
