ABSTRACT

The main purpose of this study is to find out whether or not the students who were taught by using the Language Experience Approach (LEA) gained better achievement in reading comprehension than those who were taught by using the traditional approach. The method used in this study was experimental method. The population was the third semester of engineering students of state Polytechnic of Sriwijaya in the academic year of 2018/2019. The total number of the population was 176. The sample of the study was 52 students. They were divided into two groups: group A was taught by using the LEA and group B was taught by using traditional approach. The findings of this study indicate that teaching reading through the LEA better result than did the traditional approach in terms of students' reading comprehension achievement. The result of this study is expected to be an important input for the teacher of English to develop the students' motivation and reading ability. In order to generalize the finding of this study, a further research conducted in the wider population and longer time should be done

Keywords: strategy, LEA, reading comprehension

1. INTRODUCTION

Reading is an activity of absorbing information from all readable sources. It is an active process consisting of recognition and comprehension skill [1]. By having comprehension, someone can be claimed that he has done the process of reading, and get information stated in the text. [2] states that comprehension is the essence of reading because the goal of written language is communication of messages. If we do not understand the message, we are not reading. In other words, comprehension is the important aspect of reading. Unfortunately, the students cannot comprehend English texts well. They are difficult to recognize the information of the text or answering the comprehensive questions. It also happened in the third semester of engineering students in State Polytechnic of Sriwijaya

Reading comprehension is the ability to process text, understand its meaning, and to integrate with what the reader already knows [3]. Fundamental skills required in efficient reading comprehension are knowing meaning of words, ability to understand meaning of a word from discourse context, ability to follow organization of passage and to identify antecedents and references in it, ability to draw inferences from a passage about its contents, ability to identify the main thought of a passage, ability to answer questions answered in a passage, ability to recognize the literary devices or propositional structures used in a passage and determine its tone, and finally ability to determine writer's purpose.

An individual's ability to comprehend text is influenced by their skills and their ability to process information. If word recognition is difficult, students use too much of their processing capacity to read individual words, which interferes with their ability to comprehend what is read. There are a number of reading strategies to improve reading comprehension and inferences, including improving one's vocabulary, critical text analysis and practicing deep reading [4].

Realizing the important of reading, the teacher of English should consider what kind of approaches he or she should use. It is the teacher's task to choose an approach for the students because there are a variety of approaches to reading instruction employed in classroom activities. [5] states that students learn to read by a number of approaches and classroom settings, so no type of approach can be claimed as the best. The teacher may apply and modify some different approaches to meet the students' needs. [6] state that the effective teacher of reading is not only knowledgeable regarding different approaches but also understands the necessity to use parts of various approaches to meet children's needs.

One of the ways to make the reading materials both interesting and comprehensible to the students is by using students own writing as the reading materials. This reading approach has been known well as the language Experience Approach (LEA). According to [7] this reading approach does not only decrease the reading inability but also motivate students to want to read. Students will find the text much easier to read and understand because they use vocabulary and language patterns which are already familiar to them. Therefore, the reading text becomes a

Understanding and Teaching Reading Emerald Dechant, 2013-09-13 In the words of Aldous Huxley Every man who knows how to read has it in his power to magnify himself to multiply the ways in which he exists to make his life full significant and interesting Few people question the value of reading in fact most extol its virtues As our culture becomes more complex reading plays an increasingly greater role in satisfying personal needs and in promoting social awareness and growth In the last 20 years the teaching of this invaluable skill has focused so intensely on comprehension and prediction from context that it has lost sight of the significance of automaticity and fluency in the word identification process Reading is a synthesis of word recognition and comprehension thus this text is about these basic processes and their integration A common plea from teachers today is that research and psychology be translated into teaching behavior Therefore the aim of this book is twofold one to identify report organize and discuss those bits of data research and theory that are most relevant to the teacher s understanding of the reading process and two to help educators to interpret and apply theory and research data to everyday classroom teaching as well as to the problems encountered frequently in developmental and remedial teaching
