The New Monuments and the End of Man Robert Slifkin, 2019-11-05

How leading American artists reflected on the fate of humanity in the nuclear era through monumental sculpture In the wake of the atomic bombings of Japan in 1945 artists in the United States began to question what it meant to create a work of art in a world where humanity could be rendered extinct by its own hand The New Monuments and the End of Man examines how some of the most important artists of postwar America revived the neglected tradition of the sculptural monument as a way to grapple with the cultural and existential anxieties surrounding the threat of nuclear annihilation Robert Slifkin looks at such iconic works as the industrially evocative welded steel sculptures of David Smith the austere structures of Donald Judd and the desolate yet picturesque earthworks of Robert Smithson Transforming how we understand this crucial moment in American art he traces the intersections of postwar sculptural practice with cybernetic theory science fiction cinema and literature and the political debates surrounding nuclear warfare Slifkin identifies previously unrecognized affinities of the sculpture of the 1940s and 1950s with the minimalism and land art of the 1960s and 1970s and acknowledges the important contributions of postwar artists who have been marginalized until now such as Raoul Hague Peter Gripppe and Robert Mallary Strikingly illustrated throughout The New Monuments and the End of Man spans the decades from Hiroshima to the Fall of Saigon when the atomic bomb cast its shadow over American art

Collecting Prints and Drawings Sylvia Heudecker, Andrea M. Gáldy, 2019-01-22 Cabinets of prints and drawings are found in the earliest art collections of Early Modern Europe From the sixteenth century onwards some of them acquired such fame that the necessity for an ordered and scientific display meant that a dedicated keeper was occasionally employed to ensure that fellow enthusiasts as well as visiting diplomats courtiers and artists might have access to the print room Often collected and displayed together with drawings the prints formed a substantial part of princely collections which sometimes achieved astounding longevity as a specialised group of collectibles such as the Florentine Gabinetto Disegni e Stampe at the Uffizi GDSU Prints and drawings both bought and commissioned were collected by princes and by private amateurs Like the rest of their collections the prints and drawings were usually preserved and displayed as part of or near the owner's library in close proximity to scientific instruments cut gems or small sculptural works of art Both prints and drawings not only documented an encyclopaedic approach to the knowledge available at the time but also depicted parts of the collections in the form of a paper museum Prints and drawings also served as a guide to the collections They spread their fame and the renown of their owners across Europe and into new worlds of collecting both East and West This volume explores issues such as when how and why did cabinets of prints and drawings become a specialised part of princely and private collections How important were collections of prints and drawings for the self representation of a prince or connoisseur among specialists and social peers Is the presentation of a picture hanging in a gallery for example by Charles Eisen for the Royal Galleries at Dresden to be treated
