

The background of the cover is a painting of a two-story house with light blue siding and dark brown shutters. The house is covered in a layer of snow, and a single window on the second floor is glowing with a warm yellow light. A large, full moon hangs in the dark blue sky to the left of the house. Bare tree branches are visible in the upper left corner, and a small evergreen tree stands to the left of the house. The foreground is a snowy lawn with some dark bushes.

Inspecting Jews Laurence Roth, 2004 In this book Laurence Roth argues that the popular genre of Jewish detective stories offers new insights into the construction of ethnic and religious identity Roth frames his study with the concept of kosher hybridity to look at the complex process of mediation between Jewish and American culture in which Jewish writers voice the desire to be both different from and yet the same as other Americans He argues that the detective story located at the intersection of narrative and popular culture in modern America examines the need for order in a disorderly society and thus offers a window into the negotiation of Jewish identity differing from that of literary fiction The writers of these popular cultural texts which are informed by contradiction and which thrive on intended and unintended ironies formulate idioms for American Jewish identities that intentionally and unintentionally create social ethnic and religious syntheses in American Jewish life Roth examines stories about American Jewish detectives including Harry Kemelman's Rabbi Small Faye Kellerman's Peter Decker and Rina Lazarus Stuart Kaminsky's Abe Lieberman and Rochelle Krich's Jessica Drake not only as a genre of literature but also as a reflection of contemporary acculturation in the American Jewish popular arts
