been touched by cancer The Courage to Die with the Spirit to Live tells of one man s journey from his diagnosis to his final 30 days In June 2011 my late husband Craig Sanders was diagnosed with non small cell squamous lung cancer Writing this book keeps the promise I made to Craig when he learned his battle with lung cancer was coming to an end and he was transitioning to his next phase of life During this time he lived his life to the fullest in spite of chemotherapy and radiation treatments He went on two cruises flew a plane went fishing crabbing and was able to keep his sense of humor He gave us strength and left an indelible impact in our hearts and minds The book depicts the various phases of Craig s year and a half battle with cancer He loved helping people and knew that as I penned his journey with this disease he would be helping others as well as myself We don t always know what paths our life will take Often when something catastrophic does occur we re caught off guard Had it not been for our support system of family friends and our faith the journey would have been impossible We honor and salute you and I know that Craig will always be just a prayer away from us all
