objective world to be studied and that humans must remove themselves from that world in order to find the truth An archaeology of the heart rejects this dualism rather we see mind body heart and spirit as inextricable An archaeology of the heart provides a new space for thinking through an integrated responsible and grounded archaeology where there is care for the living and the dead acknowledges the need to build responsible relationships with communities and with the archaeological record and emphasize the role of rigor in how work and research is conducted The contributions bring together archaeological practitioners from across the globe in different contexts to explore how heart centered practice can impact archaeological theory methodology and research throughout the discipline Gardenland Jennifer Wren

Atkinson,2018-08 Garden writing is not just a place to find advice about roses and rutabagas it also contains hidden histories of desire hope and frustration and tells a story about how Americans have invested grand fantasies in the common soil of everyday life Gardenland chronicles the development of this genre across key moments in American literature and history from nineteenth century industrialization and urbanization to the twentieth century rise of factory farming and environmental advocacy to contemporary debates about public space and social justice even to the consideration of the future of humanity's place on earth In exploring the hidden landscape of desire in American gardens Gardenland examines literary fiction horticultural publications and environmental writing including works by Charles Dudley Warner Henry David Thoreau Willa Cather Jamaica Kincaid John McPhee and Leslie Marmon Silko Ultimately Gardenland asks what the past century and a half of garden writing might tell us about our current social and ecological moment and it offers surprising insight into our changing views about the natural world along with realms that may otherwise seem remote from the world of leeks and hollyhocks Heartbeat, Warble, and the Electric Powwow Craig Harris,2016-04-11
