Global Change and Terrestrial Ecosystems Brian Harrison Walker, Will Steffen, 1996-11-13
 This major new book presents a collection of essays by leading authorities who address the current state of knowledge. The chapters bring together the early results of an international scientific research program designed to address what will happen to our ability to produce food and fiber and what effects there will be on biological diversity under rapid environmental change. This book addresses how these changes to terrestrial ecosystems will feed back to further environmental change. International in scope, this state-of-the-art assessment will interest policymakers, students, and scientists interested in global change, climate change, and biodiversity. Special features include descriptions of a dynamic global vegetation model, developing generic crop models, and a special section on the emerging discipline of global ecology.

Linguistic Change in French Rebecca Posner, 1997
 What is French and how has it changed over time? Can we distinguish language history from historical linguistics and language change from linguistic change? These questions are explored using copious material from the history of the French language, concentrating on changes in the relatively modern period. In particular, Posner explains how change comes about and how changes at different levels of language interact, and the role of sociological and ideological factors is set against the internal mechanisms that trigger change. This work makes a substantial contribution to the theory of linguistic change as well as to discussion of the relationship between language and history in French-speaking areas, including Canada and French Creole-speaking countries.
