Biomarkers of acid-base status and their interrelationships with body fatness, glucocorticoids, and height Yifan Hua,2022-05-09 Acid base homeostasis is essential for human health and a variety of physiological conditions Pathophysiological changes can result in acid base derangements which can be accompanied by acute and long term metabolic disorders Moreover even a narrow change of blood pH still within the physiological change e g a diet induced shift towards a more acidic status has been reported to already cause adverse health consequences Against this background we aimed to by using non invasive urinary biomarkers examine acid base related physiological and epidemiological relationships of body fatness with 24 h urine pH the potential mediatory roles of inflammatory biomarkers in the high body fat low urine pH relation and the association between 24 h urinary glucocorticoid excretion and renal citrate output as well as the prospective relationships of protein intake and dietary acid load during childhood and adolescence with adult height All study participants were selected and data came from the Dortmund Nutritional and Anthropometric Longitudinally Designed DONALD Study which includes regular examinations on dietary intake metabolism and growth in healthy children and adolescents until their adulthood without particular pre specified endpoints

Human Biology Daniel Chiras, 2012 Written for the introductory human biology course the Seventh Edition of Chiras acclaimed text maintains the original organizational theme of homeostasis presented in previous editions to present the fundamental concepts of mammalian biology and human structure and function Chiras discusses the scientific process in a thought provoking way that asks students to become deeper more critical thinkers The focus on health and homeostasis allows students to learn key concepts while also assessing their own health needs An updated and enhanced ancillary package includes numerous student and instructor tools to help students get the most out of their course

Children's Palliative Care in Africa Justin Amery, 2009 Children's palliative care has developed rapidly as a discipline as health care professionals recognise that the principles of adult palliative care may not always be applicable to children at the end of life The unique needs of dying children are particularly evident across Africa where the scale of the problem is overwhelming and the figures so enormous that they are barely comprehensible over 400 000 children in Africa died from AIDS in 2003 and out of the 166 000 children a year diagnosed with cancer 84% of these are in the developing world Despite the enormous need provision of children's palliative care in Africa is almost non-existent with very few health workers trained and confident to provide care for dying children The challenges of providing palliative care in this setting are different to those in more developed countries contending with the shortage of physical and human resources in addition to the vast scope of the care needed Written by a group with wide experience of caring for dying children in Africa

this book provides practical realistic guidance on improving access to and delivery of palliative care in this demanding setting It looks at the themes common to palliative care including communication assessment symptom management psychosocial issues ethical dilemmas end of life care and tips for the professional on compassion and conservation of energy but always retains the focus on the particular needs of the health care professional in Africa Whilst containing some theory the emphasis is on practical action throughout It will provide health care professionals working in Africa and other resource poor settings with the confidence knowledge and capacity to improve care for the terminally ill child in constrained and demanding environments
