Lost Enlightenment S. Frederick Starr, 2013-10-13 In this sweeping and richly illustrated history S Frederick Starr tells the fascinating but largely unknown story of Central Asia s medieval enlightenment through the eventful lives and astonishing accomplishments of its greatest minds remarkable figures who built a bridge to the modern world Because nearly all of these figures wrote in Arabic they were long assumed to have been Arabs In fact they were from Central Asia drawn from the Persianate and Turkic peoples of a region that today extends from Kazakhstan southward through Afghanistan and from the easternmost province of Iran through Xinjiang China Lost Enlightenment recounts how between the years 800 and 1200 Central Asia led the world in trade and economic development the size and sophistication of its cities the refinement of its arts and above all in the advancement of knowledge in many fields Central Asians achieved signal breakthroughs in astronomy mathematics geology medicine chemistry music social science philosophy and theology among other subjects

"Tribes" and "clans" in Modern Power Edward Schatz,2000 An explosion of literature on identity politics has generated critical insights into the dynamics of group solidarities This literature is all but silent however on lower aggregate subethnic attachments Dominant approaches to identity anticipate that such divisions become decreasingly important with the rise of the modern state In former Soviet Central Asia where salient subethnic divisions propel the power dynamic such approaches find a paradox The empirical challenge of subethnic politics in Central Asia begs two interrelated questions that animate this dissertation First what accounts for the persistence of subethnic identity politics when dominant approaches expect the gradual marginalization of these low aggregate group solidarities as the modern state improves its empirical capacity Second how can we explain the distinctive political forms that subethnic competition assumes On the basis of archival research ethnographic work focus groups semi structured interviews and a broad reading of indigenous periodicals and papers this project addresses these questions in the context of Kazakhstan First why did the coercive practices of modernization and ethnicization exercised by the Soviet state not preclude the political salience of subethnic identities in Kazakhstan Part one argues that low aggregate solidarities persist not in spite of attempts at modernization industrialization and cultural homogenization but because of the particular ways in which these practices are carried out Specifically it suggests that two aspects of Soviet modernization promoted subethnic divisions The political economy of pervasive shortages encouraged access networks to proliferate Across the Soviet southern tier these access networks often fell along subethnic lines Moreover Soviet nationalities policy deeply stigmatized subethnic affiliations as backward and the remnants of feudalism In doing so it drove them underground their function became illicit and sub rosa and unlikely to be detected by the agents of Soviet surveillance Thus Soviet modernization promoted subethnicity because it encouraged network of access specifically along subethnic lines The second part inquires into the particular forms that subethnic politics assumes It argues that subethnic politics routinely involves a central component of meta conflict defined as conflict over the terms of the conflict itself Leaves i ii JSAL ,2001 The Turks: Middle ages ,2002
