Stakeholder Theory Maria Bonnafous-Boucher, Jacob Dahl Rendtorff, 2016-11-08 This book provides an academic introduction to and presentation and defence of stakeholder theory as a model for the strategic management of businesses and corporations as well as of public organizations and institutions The concept of the stakeholder is generally applied to parties that affect or are affected by the activities of private or public organizations Distinct from shareholders stakeholders are those individuals entities or communities that have a connection with the activities of a corporation a firm or an organization The notion of the stakeholder is intimately linked to a conception of the business firm as an entity founded on negotiated governance in which the maximization of value for the shareholder is not the ultimate criterion In this model issues and interests that are not directly associated with shareholders and investors but which go beyond capital to encompass the concerns of civil society are considered to be of central importance This book provides a broad overview of stakeholder theory presenting it as an ethical approach to strategic management that is both pragmatic and applicable to developing democratic practices within corporations while at the same time suggesting ways in which elements of a social contract can be elaborated within the context of globalization

The Business Case of Social Business Lena Schumacher,2013-08-20 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2010 in the subject Business economics Business Ethics Corporate Ethics grade 1.5 EBS European Business School gGmbH language English abstract During recent years much has been written about Corporate Social Responsibility CSR sustainability sustainable and ethical supply chains and the power of organizations that reaches beyond their core business activities Social Business a rather new form of using corporate power in order to act in a socially desirable manner was first established by Professor Yunus Noble Peace Prize winner 2006 It is in contrast to charity because it is not a donation or charitable giving but a real investment into a business The important difference is that with a social business the entrepreneur or the participants in a social venture business do not intend to maximize profits but will always reinvest profits into the business and will keep costs and prices low so a broad range of non affluent consumers can afford the product or service Yunus Bertrand Lehmann Ortega 2009 p 5 Yunus 2006 calls this doing business for others instead of for oneself p 4 Since Social Business is a very new concept little has been written about it yet There is not even a generally accepted and shared definition of the term Social Business Millions of small social start ups whose founders intend to do something socially beneficial and who only take out from the business the money they need for their own upkeep already exist However to differentiate between charity projects and real social businesses is difficult For this reason it is impossible to collect empirical data about these start ups and projects Much more in the focus of the public eye are social businesses founded by multinational companies MNCs or at least renowned national companies This often includes a product relating to the key competence of the firm which is adapted to the needs of less well off consumers and thereby solves a shared social problem MNCs often use the know how and competence of non governmental organisations NGOs or similar institutions and start social joint ventures Since it is much easier to collect data about this kind of social business and since their influence and recognition in industrialized countries at the moment is much bigger than of the numerous small start ups this paper is going to focus on social businesses initiated by big companies

Stakeholder Thinking in Marketing Michael Jay Polonsky, 2005 Stakeholder thinking in marketing Stakeholder thinking is becoming a core part of marketing as well as other business related disciplines A search of the business source primmer database found that prior to 1995 there are 58 articles using the term stakeholder in their title and 27 academic marketing related articles with stakeholder as a key term The interest in stakeholder theory has however grown rapidly between January

2000 and November 2004 there were 228 articles using stakeholder theory in the title and 140 academic marketing-related journal articles that examined stakeholder issues. In fact, the American Marketing Association's (AMA) 2004 new definition of marketing expressly incorporates our responsibility to consider how marketing activities impact stakeholders. Marketing is an organizational function and a set of processes for creating, communicating, and delivering value to customers and for managing customer relationships in ways that benefit the organization and its stakeholders. Thus, the AMA has recognized the core role of stakeholder thinking. While there is an increased interest in stakeholder thinking in marketing, an examination of the literature would seem to suggest that there is no unified view of how stakeholder thinking can be or should be integrated into theory or practice. Many of the stakeholder works in marketing and in other disciplines still focus on the social and ethical impacts of stakeholders. This may have been where much of stakeholder thinking initially gained its prominence, but it is a broader strategic tool that can benefit a range of areas and was, in fact, the focus of Freeman's 1984 original work in the area. This is not to suggest that the general strategic implications of stakeholder thinking are not being considered, as an increasing number of works are looking at stakeholder implications in regards to exchange networks, relationship marketing, and other issues related to strategy development. The papers in this special issue have considered a range of varying perspectives, including corporate social responsibility, the impact of interacting with stakeholders, relationship issues, and broader discussions of stakeholder theory as a strategic tool. These papers have taken a diverse range of perspectives, including conceptual works, case studies, qualitative approaches, and various empirical approaches to examining the issues of interest within various pieces. The scope of papers included in the special, as well as those not included, identifies the breadth of relevance stakeholder thinking has for the application of all aspects of marketing theory and practice. The question of how stakeholders and stakeholder theory can be considered in organizational activities and marketing theory is an issue that most certainly seems to warrant further consideration. The works in this special issue have advanced this debate and identified some directions that could be considered. Stakeholder thinking is, however, not necessarily a paradigm shift in marketing thinking, although some might believe it is, but rather it broadens existing concepts such as relationship marketing, network theory, organizational social responsibility, and other areas. Hopefully, the papers presented in this special issue will encourage others to consider the inclusion of stakeholders into broader areas of marketing. Any special issue editor has to thank a range of people for assistance with developing the special issue. I would like to thank Audrey Gilmore and David Carson, editors of EJM, for allowing the special issue to be developed. Their input through the process has been invaluable. I would also like to thank the many authors of unsuccessful papers for submitting their work. It was, of course, impossible to include all papers in the special issue, but the breadth of coverage in regards to topics and geographic areas would seem to demonstrate the growing interest in stakeholder thinking within marketing. Lastly, it is imperative that I thank the reviewers without their assistance the special issue would not have been possible. The following people reviewed papers for the special issue: Anupam Jaju, Gorge
