represents one of the deepest and most complex Iron Age stratigraphic sequences excavated in southern Britain and the survival of preserved surface deposits within the interior yielded a remarkable range of metalworking debris and animal burials. Consequently this report contains a wealth of detail concerning the material culture of what had been a rich and powerful Iron Age community and it significantly extends our understanding of the nature of hillfort occupation in southern Britain.

Dogs and People in Social, Working, Economic or Symbolic Interaction L. Snyder, 2016-07-29. This is the final title to be published from the sessions of the 2002 ICAZ conference. It focuses on the role of man's best friend. As worker or companion, the dog has enjoyed a unique relationship with its human master, and the depth and variety of the papers in this fascinating collection is a testament to the interest that this symbiotic arrangement holds for many scholars working in archaeology today. The book covers an eclectic range of subjects such as considering dogs as animals of sacrifice and animal components of ancient and modern religious ritual and practice; dogs as human companions subject to loving care; visual symbolic representation; deliberate or accidental breed manipulation; as working dogs; and finally as co-inhabitants of human dwelling spaces and co-consumers of human food resources. While many of the papers in this volume have a predominant focus, they also demonstrate that the relationships between humans and dogs are rarely if ever singular or simple. Instead, these relationships are complex, often combining the practical, the ideological, and the symbolic.
