

An abstract painting with a complex composition of colors and textures. The top left features dark, swirling purple and blue tones. Below this, a horizontal band of white and light grey suggests a snowy or rocky surface. The center is dominated by large, textured blocks of yellow and green, possibly representing a landscape or a building's facade. To the right, a dark, vertical shape, perhaps a doorway or a shadow, leads to a white, textured area that looks like a wall or a snowy slope. The bottom left has a prominent, diagonal stroke of bright pink and magenta, contrasting with the darker, more muted tones of the foreground. The overall style is expressive and painterly, with visible brushstrokes and a rich, layered quality.

Snow House Lena Miles Wever Todd Poetry Series Award:

Snow House Brian Swann, 2006-04-01 The poems that make up Brian Swann's rich and constantly rewarding book Snow House are muscular and masterful. He has a marvelous ear and the ability to write poems that move insistently forward to a lovely and offhand resolution. The long and sinuous sentences that make up this collection range over the natural world, memories and myths, and like a kind of semiotic stuntman, Swann merges these subjects with the poems ostensibly describing them so that you suddenly realize that you are being pulled along by a song that mirrors itself with you in the middle, doing much of the mirroring. And yet in the end, the world of the poems retains its fierce independence, the independence of the world which could be you but isn't ever quite. John Koethe from his judge's citation: Brian Swann is our poet of the primal present. Snow House is a profound poetry that wakens us and helps us identify our sublime and perilous location. William Heyen: The scraps bright all of them, these small birds as if torn from the sun, now bloody mouthed, then a broken line moving closer, brant, no blue geese, and in synapses all round, swamp sparrows as blades of light, push in till the last one takes over, so masks drop from stones, and on the headland, windowpanes are morning swollen, and a wave curves like gravel along the long bay where no hull moves, so it all starts to look a little contrived, as if the boats had gone out to sea on cue and hidden. Here you find yourself shattered at a thousand points, flashing like crabs, a leg here, a claw there, and eyes everywhere. Manitu Bay

Poetry, 2006 Boulevard, 2006 Crazy Horse, 2013 Paradise, Indiana Bruce Snider, 2012-04-16

A father and son shovel snow from a driveway, a boy accidentally sets himself on fire, two boys fish for bluegill, a young drag queen returns home to die. At the center of it all, a teenage boy's suicide resonates through the lives of those closest to him. The poems in Bruce Snider's Paradise, Indiana describe a place where mundane events neighbor the most harrowing. Shaped by the author's experiences growing up in rural Indiana, Snider investigates the landscapes traditionally claimed by male poets such as James Wright, James Dickey, and Richard Hugo, whose visions of place rarely if ever included the presence of gays and lesbians. Paradise, Indiana envisions a seldom recorded rural America, one where everything exists side by side: the county fair and an abandoned small town, gay bars, farmers and cross-dressers, death and hope, beauty and despair. In Late Light Brian Swann, 2013-05-15 From a stone to fireflies, from childhood to growing old, Brian Swann's poems contemplate the moments and individual objects that create a whole life and our relationship to them. There is a clearing by a certain stone where images flow and are worth stopping for. I have stayed there almost all day in silence until night, remembered what belonged to it, and its shadows started to take back its own. I've found it hard to walk away as starlight infused daisies, and the stone itself began to feel like a star, so although what I have done with my life may not be much for a while, it seemed to be in line. The poems of In Late Light situate objects and experiences both large and small, concrete and abstract, within Brian Swann's perspective of the natural world. Sixty-two poems presented in four sections explore his life from early days to the present.

evoking friends and family on two continents His sharp bright imagery affirms the unique beauty of our world and explores its invisible mysteries
