Social Adaptation To Food Stress A Prehistoric Southwestern Example:

Social Adaptation to Food Stress Paul E. Minnis, 1985-04 Combining anthropology archeology and evolutionary theory Paul E Minnis develops a model of how tribal societies deal with severe food shortages While focusing on the prehistory of the Rio Mimbres region of New Mexico he provides comparative data from the Fringe Enga of New Guinea the Tikopia of Tikopia Island and the Gwembe Tonga of South Africa Minnis proposes that faced with the threat of food shortages nonstratified societies survive by employing a series of responses that are increasingly effective but also are increasingly costly and demand increasingly larger cooperative efforts The model Minnis develops allows him to infer from evidence of such factors as population size resource productivity and climate change the occurrence of food crises in the past Using the Classic Mimbres society as a test case he summarizes the regional archeological sequence and analyzes the effects of environmental fluctuations on economic and social organization He concludes that the responses of the Mimbres people to their burgeoning population were inadequate to prevent the collapse of the society in the late twelfth century In its illumination of the general issue of responses to food shortages Social Adaptation to Food Stress will interest not only archeologists but also those concerned with current food shortages in the Third World Cultural ecologists and human geographers will be able to derive a wealth of ideas methods and data from Minnis's work

Integrating Zooarchaeology and Paleoethnobotany Amber VanDerwarker, Tanya M. Peres, 2010-01-22 In recent years scholars have emphasized the need for more holistic subsistence analyses and collaborative publications towards this endeavor have become more numerous in the literature However there are relatively few attempts to qualitatively integrate zooarchaeological animal and paleoethnobotanical plant data and even fewer attempts to quantitatively integrate these two types of subsistence evidence Given the vastly different methods used in recovering and quantifying these data not to mention their different preservational histories it is no wonder that so few have undertaken this problem Integrating Zooarchaeology and Paleoethnobotany takes the lead in tackling this important issue by addressing the methodological limitations of data integration proposing new methods and innovative ways of using established methods and highlighting case studies that successfully employ these methods to shed new light on ancient foodways The volume challenges the perception that plant and animal foodways are distinct and contends that the separation of the analysis of archaeological plant and animal remains sets up a false dichotomy between these portions of the diet In advocating qualitative and quantitative data integration the volume establishes a clear set of methods for 1 determining the suitability of data integration in any particular case and 2 carrying out an integrated qualitative or quantitative approach

Constructing Community Alison E. Rautman, 2014-11-27 In Constructing Community Alison E Rautman uses the Salinas District in New Mexico to examine the relationships of subsistence practices mobility and settlement Rautman tackles a very broad topic how archaeologists use material evidence to infer and imagine how people lived in the past how they coped with everyday decisions and tensions and how they created a sense of themselves and their place in the world
