Cities & the Sea Josef W. Konvitz, 2020-03-24 Originally published in 1978 Josef Konvitz provides a broad comparative study of European port cities since the Renaissance by examining how they were built and rebuilt in the context of urban industrialization Konvitz argues that as seafaring became more critical to Western civilization intellectuals and rulers placed more importance on urban planning Planning looked different of course in various European cities In Paris riverside planning was patched into the existing frame of the city whereas Scandinavian towns on the Baltic were over designed to accommodate a degree of maritime trade unsustainable for cities writ large In the eighteenth century city planning fell out of vogue and new solutions were introduced to help solve the problems created by urban development

With a series of helpful maps Konvitz's book is an important source for urban historians of early modern Europe

European Cities in the Modern Era, 1850-1914 Friedrich Lenger, 2012-08-17 In European Cities in the Modern Era 1850-1914 Friedrich Lenger analyses the demographic and economic preconditions of European urbanization, compares the extent to which Europe's cities were characterized by heterogeneity with respect to the social, national, and religious composition of its population, and asks in which way differences resulting from this heterogeneity were resolved either peacefully or violently. Using this general perspective and extending the scope by including Eastern and Southern Europe, the dominant view of Europe's prewar cities as islands of modernity is challenged, and the ubiquity of urban violence established as a central analytical problem. Popular Theater and Society in Tsarist Russia E. Anthony Swift, 2002-12-30 This is the most comprehensive study available of the popular theater that developed during the last decades of tsarist Russia. Swift examines the origins and significance of the new people's theaters that were created for the lower classes in St. Petersburg and Moscow between 1861 and 1917. His extensively researched study, full of anecdotes from the theater world of the day, shows how these people's theaters became a major arena in which the cultural contests of late imperial Russia were played out, and how they contributed to the emergence of an urban consumer culture during this period of rapid social and political change. Swift illuminates many aspects of the story of these popular theaters: the cultural politics and aesthetic ambitions of theater directors and actors, state censorship politics, and their role in shaping the theatrical repertoire and the theater as a vehicle for social and political reform. He looks at the roots of the theaters, discusses specific theaters and performances, and explores in particular how popular audiences responded to the plays. Crime and Punishment Fyodor Dostoyevsky, 2017 Crime and Punishment is the story of a murder committed on principle of a killer who wishes to set himself outside and above society. It is marked by Dostoevsky's own harrowing experience, and yet there are moments of wild humor. This authoritative translation comes with a challenging new introduction and helpful annotation. Mothers and Daughters Barbara Alpern Engel, 1983 Presenting a study of the social and cultural origins of female radicalism in nineteenth-century Russia.

Russian Factory Women Rose L. Glickman, 1984 A sophisticated, detailed account of the lives of Russian factory women during the formative years of Russian industrial capitalism. Glickman examines the interaction of class and gender that shaped the lives of women during this period of great, often tumultuous, social, political, and economic change. Following women from the countryside into Russia's workshops and factories and describing their daily lives at work, in the family, and in society, the author suggests that women's habits, aspirations, and expectations were scarcely altered in the transition from agrarian to industrial life.
