Greeley, Most sociologists of religion describe a general decline in religious faith and practice in Europe over the last two centuries The secularizing forces of the Enlightenment science industrialization the influence of Freud and Marx and urbanization are all felt to have diminished the power of the churches and demystified the human condition In Andrew Greeley's view such overarching theories and frameworks do not begin to accommodate a wide variety of contrasting and contrary social phenomena Religion at the End of the Second Millennium engages the complexities of contemporary Europe to present a nuanced picture of religious faith rising declining or remaining stable While challenging the secularization model Greeley's approach is not polemical He examines belief in God and in life after death belief in superstition and magic convictions about the relations between church and state attitudes toward religion and science and the effect of religion on the everyday lives of people Drawing upon statistical and empirical data spanning twenty years Greeley shows that while religion has increased in some countries most notably the former communist countries and especially Russia in others it has declined Britain the Netherlands and France In some countries it is relatively unchanged primarily the traditional Catholic countries and in still others some of the social democratic countries it has both declined and increased In terms of individuals Greeley finds that religion becomes more important to people as they age He observes that surveys showing less religion among the young ignore the possibility that the age correlation is a life cycle matter and not a sign of social change Patently religion in Europe changed enormously between the end of the first millennium and the end of the second In Greeley's judgment the change has been an improvement not because superstition has been eliminated it has not but because freedom to exercise religious belief has replaced compulsion The Friendship Game Andrew M. Greeley, 1970 All about Women Andrew M.
