

The Resistance of Self-Justification to God's Grace¹

Ted Peters

Professor Emeritus of Systematic Theology and Ethics Pacific Lutheran Theological Seminary and the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, California

What is the question to which justification-by-faith is the answer? Here it is: how does our gracious God rescue us from the practice of self-justification?²

In the sixteenth-century the opposite of justification-by-faith was said by the Reformers to be justification by works or merit, for example, through indulgences and such. In our twenty-first century context, might we abstract from this five-century old debate to identify a more universal human propensity? If justification-by-faith is a genuine product of the New Testament gospel, then we expect it to illuminate theological anthropology in its broad and inclusive scope. My hypothesis: we human beings are prone to justify ourselves constantly, and this practice of self-justification blocks us from appreciating God's grace. Being a sinner includes self-justification as a resistance to God's gracious justification.

Does the realization that one is justified by God's grace in faith overcome our resistance? Does divine justification make a difference in daily life? Does it affect Christian spirituality? I believe it does. I believe that living daily by faith makes one's life better. I believe that trusting in the God who has justified us by grace softens the impact of anxiety and relieves us of the onerous burden of making ourselves look good. Once relieved of the burden of self-justification, we can live the life of freedom. Martin Luther noted: "A Christian is a perfectly free lord of all, subject to none. A Christian is a perfectly dutiful servant of all, subject to all" in love.³

Methodist theologian, Thomas Oden, helps us grasp the tension between God's grace and our resistance: "We in our self-assertiveness would much prefer to justify ourselves rather than receive God's free gift.... The message of justification is difficult to accept because it seems too good to be true. It says: Stop trying to justify yourself. You do not need us."⁴ If we wake up one day and realize—"Hey! I don't need to justify myself!"—then shackles will fall like a melted icicle, and our inner soul will feel an exhilarating liberation. This is the spiritual value of the truth theologians try to express with justification-by-faith.

If we wake up one day and realize—"Hey! I don't need to justify myself!"—then shackles will fall like a melted icicle, and our inner soul will feel an exhilarating liberation.

There is an additional benefit to the person of faith who realizes he or she is justified by God's grace. In addition to a new burst of freedom, this realization will greatly reduce human violence. Why? Because the pursuit of justice—the pursuit of self-justification—maps violence through the mechanism of scapegoating. The cold and hard fact is this: the pursuit of justice is equally as violent as the pursuit of injustice. What happens in faith is that the Holy Spirit makes present Jesus Christ—the paradigmatic victim of unjust scapegoating—in our very faith. This presence of Jesus Christ disqualifies all our efforts at self-justification and substitutes God's eternal justice as a divine gift.

What is self-justification?

Just what is entailed in the phenomenon of self-justification? In brief, self-justification consists of drawing an imaginary line between good and evil and then placing oneself on the good side of the line. In some cases, this means placing someone else on the evil side of that line. The one we place on the evil side we call through and through, and humans can neither contribute nor add to what God has done in Jesus Christ. All that is left is the joyful response by the believer, and the life of love, inspired by faith." On Religion Karl Barth,2006-11-01 The study Karl Barth has generally been excluded from religious studies departments in favour of more liberal theologians such as Tillich For many years scholar Garrett Green has argued that there is no justification for this neglect To support his theory that Barth can and should be studied as a religious theorist rather than just a theologian Garrett Green presents a brand new translation of Chapter 17 of Karl Barth s Church Dogmatics prefaced by a detailed introduction to the text This important new translation counters the idea that Barth rejected the notion of religion out of hand by correcting a number errors in the original version which obscure Barth s central argument In particular the crucial word Aufhebung in the title is translated here as sublimation rather than abolition The translation will do better justice to the German original and will be more accessible to contemporary readers Unlike the original version all Greek Latin and Hebrew citations are translated into English and the NRSV is used for the Bible quotes rather than the King James The translation is accompanied by a text by Garrett Green introducing the scholar and student to Barth as a religious theorist The book concludes with appendices containing teaching materials and a summary of developed by the author in the classroom over years
