Explaining Divergent Levels of Longevity in High-Income Countries National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, Panel on Understanding Divergent Trends in Longevity in High-Income Countries, 2011-07-27 During the last 25 years life expectancy at age 50 in the United States has been rising but at a slower pace than in many other high income countries such as Japan and Australia This difference is particularly notable given that the United States spends more on health care than any other nation Concerned about this divergence the National Institute on Aging asked the National Research Council to examine evidence on its possible causes According to Explaining Divergent Levels of Longevity in High Income Countries the nation's history of heavy smoking is a major reason why lifespans in the United States fall short of those in many other high income nations Evidence suggests that current obesity levels play a substantial part as well The book reports that lack of universal access to health care in the U S also has increased mortality and reduced life expectancy though this is a less significant factor for those over age 65 because of Medicare access For the main causes of death at older ages cancer and cardiovascular disease available indicators do not suggest that the U S health care system is failing to prevent deaths that would be averted elsewhere In fact cancer detection and survival appear to be better in the U S than in most other high income nations and survival rates following a heart attack also are favorable Explaining Divergent Levels of Longevity in High Income Countries identifies many gaps in research For instance while lung cancer deaths are a reliable marker of the damage from smoking no clear cut marker exists for obesity physical inactivity social integration or other risks considered in this book Moreover evaluation of these risk factors is based on observational studies which unlike randomized controlled

Rubin, 2017-11-22 Canadian Quarterly Review and Family Magazine, 1864 The New York Mirror Theodore Sedgwick Fay, 1833 The Poets and Writers Guide to Publicity and Promotion, Measuring What We Spend National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, Panel on Redesigning the BLS Consumer Expenditure Surveys, 2013-03-15 The Consumer Expenditure CE surveys are the only source of information on the complete range of consumers expenditures and incomes in the United States as well as the characteristics of those consumers The CE consists of two separate surveys 1 a national sample of households interviewed five times at three month intervals and 2 a separate national sample of households that complete two consecutive one week expenditure diaries For more than 40 years these surveys the responsibility of the Bureau of Labor Statistics BLS have been the principal source of knowledge about changing patterns of consumer spending in the U S population In February 2009 BLS initiated the Gemini Project the aim of which is to redesign the CE surveys to improve data quality through a verifiable reduction in measurement error with a particular focus on underreporting The Gemini Project initiated a series of information gathering meetings conference sessions forums and workshops to identify appropriate strategies for improving CE data quality As part of this effort BLS requested the National Research Council's Committee on National Statistics CNSTAT to convene an expert panel to build on the Gemini Project by conducting further investigations and proposing redesign options for the CE surveys. The charge to the Panel on Redesigning the BLS Consumer Expenditure Surveys includes reviewing the output of a Gemini convened data user needs forum and methods workshop and convening its own household survey producers workshop to obtain further input. In addition, the panel was tasked to commission options from contractors for consideration in recommending possible redesigns. The panel was further asked by BLS to create potential redesigns that would put a greater emphasis on proactive data collection to improve the measurement of consumer expenditures. Measuring What We Spend summarizes the deliberations and activities of the panel, discusses the conclusions about the uses of the CE surveys and why a redesign is needed, as well as recommendations for the future. The New-York Mirror, 1833 Aging and the

Macroeconomy National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Board on Mathematical Sciences and Their Applications, Committee on the Long-Run Macroeconomic Effects of the Aging U.S. Population, 2013-01-10. The United States is in the midst of a major demographic shift. In the coming decades, people aged 65 and over will make up an increasingly large percentage of the population. The ratio of people aged 65 to people aged 20-64 will rise by 80%. This shift is happening for two reasons: people are living longer, and many couples are choosing to have fewer children and to have those children somewhat later in life. The resulting demographic shift will present the nation with economic challenges both to absorb the costs and to leverage the benefits of an aging population. Aging and the Macroeconomy: Long Term Implications of an Older Population presents the fundamental factors driving the aging of the U.S. population, as well as its societal implications and likely long-term macroeconomic effects in a global context. The report finds that while population aging does not pose an insurmountable challenge to the nation, it is imperative that sensible policies are implemented soon to allow companies and households to respond. It offers four practical approaches for preparing resources to support the future consumption of households and for adapting to the new economic landscape. Useless Activity Christopher Webb, 2022-07-01. Using a broad range of archival material from Washington University St. Louis, the University of Glasgow, and the British Library, Useless Activity: Work, Leisure, and British Avant Garde Fiction, 1960-1975 is the first study to ask why the experimental writing of the 1960s and 1970s appears so fraught with anxiety about its own uselessness, before suggesting that this very anxiety was symptomatic of a unique period in British literary history when traditional notions about literary work and what worked in terms of literature were being radically scrutinised and reassessed. The study is divided into five chapters, with three of those dedicated to the close analysis of work produced by three writers representative of the 1960s British avant-garde: Eva Figs (1932-2012), B.S. Johnson (1933-1973), and Alexander Trocchi (1925-1984). The book argues that these writers' preoccupations with concepts related to work, such as leisure debt and various forms of neglected labour like housework, allow us to rethink the British avant garde's relation to realism while posing broader questions about the production and value of post war literary avant gardism more generally Useless Activity proposes that only with an understanding of the British avant garde's engagement with the idea of work and its various corollaries can we appreciate these writers move away from certain forms of literary realism and their contribution to the development of the modern British novel during the mid twentieth century The Nation ,1871 The Bookman ,1900 Bound to Please Michael Dirda,2005 A showcase of one hundred of the world's most significant books offers the author's introductory essays on such writers as James Boswell Colette and Joseph Roth and includes explorations of a range of genres and specific works The New-York Mirror ,1833 Resident Duty Hours Institute of Medicine,Committee on Optimizing Graduate Medical Trainee (Resident) Hours and Work Schedules to Improve Patient Safety,2009-05-27 Medical residents in hospitals are often required to be on duty for long hours In 2003 the organization overseeing graduate medical education adopted common program requirements to restrict resident workweeks including limits to an average of 80 hours over 4 weeks and the longest consecutive period of work to 30 hours in order to protect patients and residents from unsafe conditions resulting from excessive fatigue Resident Duty Hours provides a timely examination of how those requirements were implemented and their impact on safety education and the training institutions An in depth review of the evidence on sleep and human performance indicated a need to increase opportunities for sleep during residency training to prevent acute and chronic sleep deprivation and minimize the risk of fatigue related errors In addition to recommending opportunities for on duty sleep during long duty periods and breaks for sleep of appropriate lengths between work periods the committee also recommends enhancements of supervision appropriate workload and changes in the work environment to improve conditions for safety and learning All residents medical educators those involved with academic training institutions specialty societies professional groups and consumer patient safety organizations will find this book useful to advocate for an improved culture of safety The Classical Review ,1890 This companion to the Classical Quarterly contains reviews of new work dealing with the literatures and civilizations of ancient Greece and Rome Over 300 books are reviewed each year The Autographic Mirror ,1866 The Museum of Foreign Literature, Science, and Art ,1841 The Journal of Education ,1894
