Models of Understanding Text Bruce K. Britton,Arthur C. Graesser,2014-02-25 What is text understanding It is the dynamic process of constructing coherent representations and inferences at multiple levels of text and context within the bottleneck of a limited capacity working memory The field of text and discourse has advanced to the point where researchers have developed sophisticated models of comprehension and identified the particular assumptions that underlie comprehension mechanisms in precise analytical or mathematical detail The models offer a priori predictions about thought and behavior not merely ad hoc descriptions of data Indeed the field has evolved to a mature science The contributors to this volume collectively cover the major models of comprehension in the field of text and discourse Other books are either narrow covering only a single theoretical framework or do not focus on systematic modeling efforts In addition this book focuses on deep levels of understanding rather than language codes syntax and other shallower levels of text analysis As such it provides readers with up to date information on current psychological models specified in quantitative or analytical detail

The Janus-Face of Language: Where Are the Emotions in Words and the Words in Emotions? Cornelia Herbert,Thomas Ethofer,Andreas J. Fallgatter,Peter Walla,Georg Northoff,2018-09-28 Language has long been considered independent from emotions In the last few years however research has accumulated empirical evidence against this theoretical belief of a purely cognitive based foundation of language In particular through research on emotional word processing it has been shown that processing of emotional words activates emotional brain structures elicits emotional facial expressions and modulates action tendencies of approach and avoidance probably in a similar manner as processing of non verbal emotional stimuli does In addition it has been shown that emotional content is already processed in the visual cortex in a facilitated manner which suggests that processing of emotional language content is able to circumvent in depth semantic analysis Yet this is only one side of the coin Very recent research putting words into context suggests that language may also construe emotions and that by studying word processing one can provide a window to one s own feelings All in all the empirical observations support the thesis of a close relationship between language and emotions at the level of word meaning as a specific evolutionary achievement of the human species As such this relationship seems to be different from the one between emotions and speech where emotional meaning is conveyed by nonverbal features of the voice But what does this relationship between written words and emotions theoretically imply for the processing of emotional information The present Research Topic and its related articles aim to provide answers to this question This book comprises several experimental studies investigating the brain structures and the time course of emotional word processing Included are studies examining the affective core dimensions underlying affective word processing and studies that show how these basic affective dimensions influence word processing in general as well as the interaction between words feelings and expressive behavior In addition new impetus comes from studies that on the one hand investigate how task sublexical and intrapersonal factors influence emotional word processing and on the other hand extend emotional word processing to the domains of social context and self related processing Finally future perspectives are outlined including research on emotion and language acquisition culture and multilingualism In summary this textbook offers scientists from different disciplines insight into the neurophysiological behavioral and subjective mechanisms underlying emotion and language interactions It gives new impulses to existing theories on the embodiment of language and emotion and provides new ways of looking at emotion cognition interactions
