Racial Ambiguity in Asian American Culture Jennifer

Ann Ho,2015-05-12 The sheer diversity of the Asian American populace makes them an ambiguous racial category Indeed the 2010 U S Census lists twenty four Asian ethnic groups lumping together under one heading people with dramatically different historical backgrounds and cultures In Racial Ambiguity in Asian American Culture Jennifer Ann Ho shines a light on the hybrid and indeterminate aspects of race revealing ambiguity to be paramount to a more nuanced understanding both of race and of what it means to be Asian American Exploring a variety of subjects and cultural artifacts Ho reveals how Asian American subjects evince a deep racial ambiguity that unmoors the concept of race from any fixed or finite understanding For example the book examines the racial ambiguity of Japanese American nisei Yoshiko Nakamura deLeon who during World War II underwent an abrupt transition from being an enemy alien to an assimilating American via the Mixed Marriage Policy of 1942 It looks at the blogs of Korean Taiwanese and Vietnamese Americans who were adopted as children by white American families and have conflicted feelings about their honorary white status And it discusses Tiger Woods the most famous mixed race Asian American whose description of himself as Cablinasian reflecting his background as Black Asian Caucasian and Native American perfectly captures the ambiguity of racial classifications Race is an abstraction that we treat as concrete a construct that reflects only our desires fears and anxieties Jennifer Ho demonstrates in Racial Ambiguity in Asian American Culture that seeing race as ambiguous puts us one step closer to a potential antidote to racism Willow

Springs ,2003 The Night My Mother Met Bruce Lee Paisley Rekdal,2007-12-18 When you come from a mixed race background as Paisley Rekdal does her mother is Chinese American and her father is Norwegian thorny issues of identity politics and interracial desire are never far from the surface Here in this hypnotic blend of personal essay and travelogue Rekdal journeys throughout Asia to explore her place in a world where one s appearance is the deciding factor of one s ethnicity In her soul searching voyage she teaches English in South Korea where her native colleagues call her a hermaphrodite and is dismissed by her host family in Japan as an American despite her assertion of being half Chinese A visit to Taipei with her mother who doesn t know the dialect leads to the bitter realization that they are only tourists which makes her further question her identity Written with remarkable insight and clarity Rekdal a poet whose fierce lyricism is apparent on every page demonstrates that the shifting frames of identity can be as tricky as they are exhilarating Why Writing Matters Nicholas Delbanco,2020-03-17 Drawing lessons from writers of all ages and writing across genres a distinguished teacher and writer reveals the enduring importance of writing for our time In this new contribution to Yale University Press's Why X Matters series a distinguished writer and scholar tackles central questions of the discipline of writing Drawing on his own experience with mentors such as John Updike John Gardner and James Baldwin and in turn having taught such rising stars as Jesmyn Ward Delbanco looks in particular at questions of influence and the contradictory simultaneous impulses toward imitation and originality Part memoir part literary history and part analysis this unique text will resonate with students writers writing teachers and bibliophiles Appropriate: A Provocation Paisley Rekdal, 2021-02-16 A timely nuanced work that dissects the thorny debate around cultural appropriation and the literary imagination How do we properly define cultural appropriation and is it always wrong If we can write in the voice of another should we And if so what questions do we need to consider first In Appropriate creative writing professor Paisley Rekdal addresses a young writer to delineate how the idea of cultural appropriation has evolved and perhaps calcified in our political climate What follows is a penetrating exploration of fluctuating literary power and authorial privilege about whiteness and what we really mean by the term empathy that examines writers from William Styron to Peter Ho Davies to Jeanine Cummins Lucid reflective and astute Appropriate presents a generous new framework for one of the most controversial subjects in contemporary literature
