exhilaration of victory and the terrible despondency of defeat the satisfaction of seeing his enemies go down and the horrific crash of bullets smashing into his own body In Soldier Against the Odds he discusses the paradox of army life from the great parades with hundreds of marching troops to the weeks and months of silent movement every nerve at full stretch with only the muzzle of your rifle or machine gun between you and the opposition The author has served all over the world in the mind numbing cold in the blazing desert heat and in sweat drenched jungle warfare He has faced minefields traps and ambushes as well as bombs bullets rockets and napalm And he has also been a prisoner of war Wounded in action and captured by the enemy at the battle of the Imjin River in Korea he was released two years later but his injuries meant that he was declared unfit for further military service He defied the odds however passing the SAS selection course and going on to enjoy a long career in the Special Air Service

Soldier L: The Embassy Siege Shaun Clarke, 2013-12-12 Ever since its formation during World War II the Special Air Service had operated under conditions of such secrecy that few members of the public even knew of its existence By the evening of 5 May 1980 all this had changed drastically On the morning of 30 April the Iranian Embassy at No 16 Price's Gate in London was seized by six well armed terrorists members of the Revolutionary Movement for the Liberation of Arabistan Nineteen Iranian nationals and four British citizens were captured During the subsequent negotiations between the terrorists and the British police a number of the hostages were released When on the fifth day of the siege one of the hostages was shot dead and his body pushed out through the door of the Embassy the police decided that the time for negotiation was over and asked the military to end the siege The only men deemed to possess enough skill and daring for this dangerous task were those of the legendary Special Air Service the SAS In fact convinced that they would eventually be called in to rescue the hostages the SAS had already mapped out and practised a high risk operation in their top secret Killing House in Hereford and in some army barracks two miles from the Embassy On the evening of 5 May their well rehearsed plans were put into action when twelve SAS soldiers dressed in black in wearing anti gas respirators and NBC hoods made their courageous assault on the Embassy Using a combination of abseiling ropes stun grenades sub machine guns and 9mm high power handguns and in the full glare of the international media they routed the terrorists and succeeded in rescuing the hostages Within hours the SAS once relatively unknown had become the most celebrated regiment in the history of modern warfare
