Australian national bibliography, 1961

Adventures of a Soldier in the Great War 1914 - 1918 and Some of His Poems David Yuille, 2012-09-01 The author volunteered for the army in August 1914 and the first two chapters of his book give an almost day to day account of his adventures as a private in the trenches He was introduced to warfare and trained as a Lewis gunner before the battle of Loos He took part in the battle itself and in the heavy fighting afterwards In 1916 he was sent to Blighty for an appendix operation and after training he became a Second Lieutenant In a third chapter he describes how he cut his teeth as an officer in Palestine and returned to France in May 1918

for more heavy fighting In September 1918 he was severely wounded in an action for which he was awarded the Military Cross Finally his letter home concerning this action is followed by a dozen of his poems which reveal some of his feelings at the time The book would be of particular interest to historians and to school children studying the Great War 1914-1918

A French Soldier's War Diary 1914-1918 Henri Desagneaux, 2014-09-30 A classic up close memoir of fighting in the chaos of World War I Today we may have an orderly historical picture of the Great War But for a soldier like Henri Desagneaux there was no pattern to be seen from the trenches where he executed orders ensuring that dozens of men had to die attempting to achieve impossible objectives worked out at a headquarters in the rear His diary one of the classic French accounts of the conflict gives a vivid insight into what it was like to execute those orders and to live in the trenches with increasingly demoralized unruly and mutinous men In terse unflinching prose he records their experiences as they confronted the acute dangers of the front line The appalling conditions in which they fought and the sheer intensity of the shellfire and the close quarter combat have rarely been conveyed with such immediacy Library of Congress Subject Headings Library of Congress, Library of Congress.
