Summer At Little Lava A Season At The Edge Of The World:

Summer at Little Lava Charles Fergus, 1999-08 Little Lava is a farm on the west coast of Iceland No roads lead to it the way lies across a lagoon flooded twice a day by the tide A lava field borders the farm From the house views give onto mountains volcanoes rugged coast and the pure Icelandic sky In Summer at Little Lava Charles Fergus tells how he fixed up an abandoned house on the farm and spent a summer there with his wife and their young son living day to day in great simplicity without heat electricity running water or other conveniences Inspired by Henry Beston's classic book The Outermost House about a year Beston spent living in a cottage on Cape Cod Fergus sought a place at the outer limits of civilization and on the coast of Iceland he found it As it happened there was a sudden death in his family the cruel pointless murder of his mother at her home in Pennsylvania and so in the twilight open spaces of Iceland Fergus confronted his grief in the midst of the country's abundant wildlife and distinctive geology its history and mythology The little house on the coast became a refuge as he sought to recover himself and the meaning of his life Little Lava was a place where I could pass the days in peace he tells us where I could take the first steps into a future that I hoped would not be so dimmed with grief and pain Summer at Little Lava is a wise and vigilant book It touches on Iceland and Icelanders birds and nature tragedy and personal loss in strong resonant prose it evokes the strange and compelling landscape of Iceland

Looking for the Hidden Folk Nancy Marie Brown, 2022-10-04 In exploring how Icelanders interact with nature and their idea that elves live among us Nancy Marie Brown shows us how altering our perceptions of the environment can be a crucial first step toward saving it Icelanders believe in elves Why does that make you laugh asks Nancy Marie Brown in this wonderfully quirky exploration of our interaction with nature Looking for answers in history science religion and art from ancient times to today Brown finds that each discipline defines what is real and unreal natural and supernatural demonstrated and theoretical alive and inert Each has its own way of perceiving and valuing the world around us And each discipline can be defined in the Icelandic perception by its own sort of elf Illuminated by her own encounters with Iceland's Otherworld in ancient lava fields on a holy mountain beside a glacier or an erupting volcano crossing the cold desert at the island's heart on horseback Looking for the Hidden Folk offers an intimate conversation about how we look at and find value in nature It reveals how the words we use and the stories we tell shape the world we see It argues that our beliefs about the Earth will preserve or destroy it Scientists name our time the Anthropocene the Human Age Climate change will lead to the mass extinction of numerous animal species unless we humans change our course Iceland suggests a different way of thinking about the Earth one that offers hope Icelanders believe in elves and you should too

Appalachian Winter Marcia Bonta, 2011-12-01 Winter is the season that most tests our mettle There are the obvious challenges of the weather freezing rain wind chill deep snow dangerous ice but also the psychological burdens of waiting for spring and the enduring often false starts that accompany its eventual return On the surface perhaps winter might seem an odd season for a nature book but there is plenty of beauty and life in the woods if only we know where to look The stark white landscape sparkles in the sunshine and glows beneath the moon on crisp clear nights the opening up of the forest makes it easy to see long distances birds some of which can be easily seen only in winter flock to feeders and animals even those that should be hibernating make surprise visits from time to time Appalachian Winter offers acclaimed naturalist Marcia Bonta's view of one season as experienced on and around her 650-acre home on the westernmost ridge of the hill and valley landscape that dominates central Pennsylvania Written in the style of a journal each day's entry focuses on her walks and rambles through the woods and fields that she has known and loved for over thirty years Along the way she discovers a long-eared owl in a dense stand of conifers tracks a bear through an early December snowfall explains the life and ecological niche of the red-backed vole and examines the recent arrival of an Asian ladybug These are but a few of the tidbits sprinkled throughout the book interwoven with the human stories of Bonta's family as well as the highway builders and shopping mall developers that threaten the idyllic peacefulness of her mountain This is the fourth and final volume of Bonta's seasonal meditations on the natural history of the northern Appalachian Mountains Her gentle charming accounts of changing weather and of the struggles faced by plants animals and insects breathe new warmth into the coldest months of the year
